Celebrity Dirt

Politics can indeed be a laughing matter

LOS ANGELES — Seattle Mayor Norman Rice won a televised "Funniest Mayor" contest by joking about his rain-soaked city, comparing it to a moisturizing pad.

In a videotaped routine on HBO's "Comic Relief VII" show Saturday night, Rice also manipulated his voice to gurgle as though he were speaking underwater.

Rice poked fun at his city's environmentalist image too. After New York Yankees fans threw garbage onto the field during a playoff game against the Seattle Mariners, Rice said, Seattle fans sorted through the waste for recycling.

The victory, determined by an applause meter that measured audience approval, earned $7,500 for Seattle's Health Care for the Homeless program.

Prince Charles leads tough, artistic life

SIMI VALLEY, Calif. — Just what does the heir to the British throne do all day? Prince Charles spends some of those regal hours painting.

The Ronald Reagan Presidential Library will display 40 watercolors by Charles at a Nov. 18-Jan. 7 exhibit requested by former first lady Nancy Reagan.

Library spokeswoman Lynda Schuler says the prince has been sketching and painting landscapes for more than 20 years.

Sauce fan wonders if Paul Newman acts

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Paul Newman says a letter from a fan of his spaghetti sauce helped keep his celebrity in perspective.

Writing to rave about Newman's Own sauce, the fan noted that his girlfriend claimed Newman had done some acting.

"If your acting is as good as your spaghetti sauce, you must be great," the letter said. "Do you have any movies on VCR?"

Newman, who described the letter at a luncheon for the Michigan Council of Foundations, said he framed and hung it.

O'Grady gets reunion for Veterans Day

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Scott O'Grady expected a Veterans Day salute to the military. He also got a surprise personal salute from a few Marines.

The downed fighter pilot who became a hero by displaying his survival skills in the Bosnian woods took the field at halftime of the Florida-South Carolina football game Saturday.

Suddenly, eight of his Marine rescuers walked out for a public reunion orchestrated by school and Marine Corps officials.
