 was changed, according to an article in the May 4 Harrisburg Patriot-News.
 Recently the dispute was settled, and preliminary site work has begun.
 University expansion took another form with its July 1 mergers with the Geisinger Health System and The Dickinson School of Law.
 The merger was protested by nurses at the University's Hershey Medical Center because many lost benefits as a result of the merger.
 The restructuring of the University's Commonwealth Educational System also occurred on July 1. Several campuses merged together to form four different four-year colleges and the Commonwealth College, which encompasses the remaining 12 campuses.

 The passage of the lowest base tuition increase at the University since the late 1960s on July 11 also affected students.
 A differential tuition program was approved along with the bill, under which students with more than 60 credits will pay more tuition than lower division undergraduates.
 University President Graham Spanier announced also that the University will distribute the New York Times, USA Today, the Centre Daily Times and The Daily Collegian to drop points in the dorms for a $5 fee.

In sports, the women's rugby team was crowned national champion on June 18. The team defeated Radcliffe, 22-20, for its first-ever national title.
 While the rugby team was riding high on success, the men's basketball team was hit with a loss.
 On July 31, the University granted basketball player Ryan Bailey, last season's starting point guard, permission to be contacted by other schools in order to transfer to another basketball program.
 Bailey enrolled at UCLA where he will redshirt this year and join the Bruins as a walk-on. As a freshman last season, Bailey averaged 8.4 points and four rebounds per game for the Nittany Lions.

Headlines

 dents, but the borough and Patton Township endorsed the idea of keeping the library downtown.
 The issue of loitering came up after several downtown businesses claimed loiterers were intimidating potential customers.
 The State College Borough Council unanimously passed an ordinance to prohibit loitering within town limits, despite opposition from area residents.
 The East College Heights traffic diverters remained a controversial issue among Centre Region residents. A new political action group, Citizens for Public Access, formed to try to have the barriers removed.

CPA unsuccessfully tried to have a referendum on the borough's ballot.
 Meanwhile, Ferguson Township supervisors said they would file a lawsuit against the borough because the township was not consulted before the diverters were made permanent.
 State College Medical Services, a medical office, planned to offer abortions at Suite 210 in the Uni-Mart Building, 477 E. Beaver Ave.
 HFL Corp., the company that leased the space to State College Medical Services, terminated the company's lease, saying the medical practice misled them as to what types of services would be performed.

An eviction hearing has yet to be held.
 Two well-known national retailers opened in the area. American Outfitters, 216 W. College Ave., a store specializing in designer-label clothes, opened during the week of the 31st Annual Central Pennsylvania Festival of the Arts.
 The festival, which ran from Aug. 9 to 13, brought together storytellers, musicians, painters and sculptors to entertain thousands of visitors who flooded the streets for the week.
 Dunkin' Donuts, 2501 E. College Ave. brought the doughnut back into the local fast food market.
 The new Dunkin' Donuts features a lounge-type atmosphere.
