Jamie Miller (freshman-psychology) is taking the freshman seminar for the psychology discipline. She said the small class size of seminars helps create a more intimate an idea of what university teacher-student relationship.

"Some aspects are helpful, like helping to adjust to college," Miller said.

Paulette Berner, academic adviser in the School of Nursing and the College of Health and Human Development, said the freshman nursing seminars have received positive feedback so far. She added the seminars as well because it at all.

gives them an opportunity to learn about first-year students, who they will most likely have again as upperclass-

In addition to familiarizing students with their professors, the seminars can give students majors have to offer.

Heather Spring (junior-management science and information systems) started out in the chemistry major, but then switched to the business major last spring.

"I think it (a freshman seminar) would have helped me," Spring said. "I was pretty clueless coming in here; I didnursing faculty enjoys the n't know what I wanted to do

"The public is the public. It's their process so they should be able to watch it," he said.

Heicklen said because he is waiting for official notice from the court. He is not sure what will happen next. "There will be a lot of jockeying around over the next week," he said.

Heicklen said he suspects the judge will notify him and ask what he wants to do once notification of the board's decision is received.

If Heicklen decides to drop the case, it will be over. However, Heicklen said if he is not happy with the solicitor's statement, he will inform the judge, who will then make a decision.

"That's my guess what will happen," Heicklen said.

In a press release from the Libertarian Party prior to the board's informal announcement, Heicklen said the board was asked once by phone and once by writing Aug. 30 to allow watchers to be present for the count.

The release also states the party sent a letter Sept. 25 to the Centre County Commissioners office. The first request was denied, but the others were not replied to, according to the release.

Pennsylvania law requires that two or three watchers and any candidates be allowed to watch the count, Heicklen said

Connie Lucas, Republican candidate for county commissioner, and H. Scott Conklin, Democratic candidate, both said they would be in favor of whatever the law states.

Global warming could produce deadly weather

GENEVA (AP) - Cities including sions, the climate on earth over the New York and Tokyo may face floodwill suffer from drought and Australia's Great Barrier Reef may be destroyed unless more is done to stop global warming, the World Wildlife Fund for Nature warned yesterday.

The environmental group urged governments meeting in Germany next week to honor earlier pledges to cut emissions of carbon dioxide one of the main greenhouse gases by implementing tough energy-saving policies.

"Evidence for the warming of our planet over the last 200 years is now overwhelming," said a WWF state- cities such as New York, Boston, Balment. "With no action to curb emisnext century could become warmer ing; large swathes of Latin America than any the human species has lived through.'

It said China's Giant Panda and the Arctic polar bear were among the species at risk of extinction from global warming.

WWF commissioned the Climatic Research Unit at Britain's University of East Anglia to conduct research into various climate change scenarios over the next few decades.

It projected that sea levels would rise between three-quarters of an inch to four inches per decade. This would threaten low-lying U.S. coastal timore and Miami with flooding.
