Osagie leaves helping

By Colleen Boyle COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

For the past few years, one southwestern Pennsylvania challenged others to connect with the world around Emmanuel I. Osagie may have served as chancellor of Penn State Fayette for only three years before his sudden passing on Tuesday afternoon, but "he really made a mark," colleague Susan Brimo-Cox said.

From working with a nursing school in India to sponsoring an international food sampling event last fall, Osagie shared his broad vision with his students and the

"He brought a lot of energy, enthusiasm and wonderful initiatives to this campus," said Brimo-Cox, public affairs coordinator for Penn State Fayette. "He challenged everyone on campus to not only do their best but to excel. It was invigorating.'

Osagie, a 58-year-old Nigerian native, died on Tuesday after complications from an illness. Francis Achampong, chief academic officer at Penn State Mont Alto, will become interim chancellor at Penn State Fayette on March 22.

Osagie is survived by his wife and two children.

"He will be sadly missed," said John Romano, vice president for the Commonwealth Campuses, who helped with the decision to hire Osagie in 2007.

"Dr. Osagie was a man of great vision and passion, rooted in making Penn State Fayette. The room with his presence.

Williams said the group mem-thinking. "Wow, this guy really has the vision and the energy to move the Penn State Fayette

Some examples of Osagie's inicampus forward.

Penn State Fayette Chancellor Emmanuel I. Osagie died on Tuesday afternoon. He worked at Fayette for the past three years.

Eberly Campus, a campus committed to excellence in in bers left their visit to the campus excellence all areas, including building connections with the greater commusouthwestern Pennsylvania."

Osagie received his bachelor of science degree from Southern tiatives include the Coal and Coke University from and completed his Ph.D. and master of science degrees in agricultural economics at Louisiana State University. Before joining the Penn State community, Osagie worked as a professor, dean of The College of New Jersey's School of Business and presenter of regional grantwriting workshops for NASA.

Roger Williams, executive director of the Penn State Alumni Association, remembers Osagie's enthusiastic and energetic personality, saying Osagie struck the Alumni Association members as the kind of person "who just fills a

Heritage Music Festival, the CEO Conversations Speakers Series and the annual Blues and White

Gala — an event that raises money for student scholarships. In addition, he pioneered Science Forensics, which helps underachieving students in 8th and 9th grades with science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

Brimo-Cox said Penn State Fayette is looking forward to continuing the signature events Osagie helped create to make the campus a "premier student-centered institution.

To e-mail reporter: cab5356@psu.edu

Case against photographer dropped by DA

By Greg Galiffa COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

Penn State student and Daily Collegian photographer Michael Felletter finally got the news he has been waiting a year and a half to hear — charges filed against him stemming from the 2008 riot were dismissed.

In a March 11 press release, Centre County District Attorney Stacy Parks Miller announced

she filed a motion to drop an appeal for the case, ending a protracted legal battle against Felletter. "For almost two years now,

I've been put Felletter through this judicial system, and now it is finally done," Felletter (senior-visual journalism) wrote in an e-mail. "I feel closure." Felletter's sense of closure comes after he was charged with five counts of misdemeanor failure to disperse and one count of misdemeanor disorderly conduct after taking pictures of a riot that overtook downtown State College after Penn State's football victory against Ohio State University on Oct. 25, 2008. Felletter's case was dropped in January 2009 and re-filed in March with one count of failure to disperse bound over for trial. Centre County Judge David E. Grine dismissed the remaining charge in July 2009, citing unclear evidence. Former Centre County District Attorney Michael Madeira then filed an appeal to the State Superior Court following the dismissal, where the case has remained — until now.

"For almost two years now, I've been put through this judicial system, and now it is finally done."

> Michael Felletter senior - visual journalism

Felletter's attorney Andrew Shubin said he appreciates Parks Miller's "careful and considerate review" of the case's record and the constitutional principles involved.

Parks Miller stated in the press release that after reviewing the facts of the case and the issues surrounding it, she found reason to discontinue the appeal. In January, Parks Miller submitted a letter to the Superior Court of Pennsylvania stating that she did not intend to file a reply brief in Felletter's case.

The letter was filed as a response to Shubin's contesting the appeal of the case filed by the district attorney, though it did not necessarily mean she was dropping the charges. During her campaign last year, however, Parks Miller called the case a waste of resources," Felletter believed it was only a matter of time before the charges were dis-

"I kind of knew it was bound to happen, but it was just always there, hanging over my head," he

"Now it's finally over and I feel relieved.

To e-mail reporter: gmg5041@psu.edu

Police investigate cases of indecent exposure

By Greg Galiffa COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

masked man indecently exposed himself in an East Halls Police Deputy Director Tyrone women's bathroom just days before Parham said despite this being the spring break, and Penn State Police seventh indecent exposure reportaren't ruling out that he may be ed this academic year, he doesn't responsible for four other similar think it's a trend on campus. incidents last fall.

in a women's communal bathroom week." at Brumbaugh Hall.

was wearing jeans and a neoprene reported last semester: mask with mouth and eyeholes cut out, police said. Authorities say he

A female resident told police a this is a growing issue." Parham basement of Holmes Hall. The man dents left for spring break. Police masked man with a skinny build said Friday, "We will continue inter- was wearing a mask, had a skinny are asking residents to lock and dark eyes exposed himself to viewing students who may have build and light skin, and was naked her at about 10:45 p.m. on March 2 seen or heard something for last from the waist down.

The man was reportedly shirt- if this incident is related unusual for exposures to be conless at the time of the incident but to four indecent exposures nected, as those who commit this

■ Aug. 10 - 21, 2009: Three indecent exposures in Brumbaugh and is about 6-foot-1-inch. Penn State Holmes Halls were reported to police. The actor was a masked, college-age male with a skinny build and dark hair.

■ Sept. 6, 2009: A masked man "We have no reason to believe laundry at about 1:15 a.m. in the since it took place right before stu-

State College Police Department Parham said police are unsure Capt. Dana Leonard said it is not

SPA LateNight Presents.

type of crime may be a "serial offender.

'We've been able to link one perpetrator to other incidents, Leonard said. "They would do it over and over. It's some sort of sexual compulsion.

Parham said police do not have exposed himself to a woman doing any further information on the case doors, refrain from piggybacking into dorms and report any suspicious activity to authorities at (814)

To e-mail reporter: gmg5041@psu.edu

