

The Daily Published independently by students at Penn State

psucollegian.com

Vol. 110 No. 137

PUA official under fire for tweets

By Casey McDermott COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

Newly appointed UPUA Student English) said the Life and Diversity Chairman Noah

Karn has come under fire for racial and gay slurs posted on his Twitter page. The allegations against Karn saved surfaced Thursday evening, when Rainbow Roundtable called into ques-President and former UPUA tion.

Student Life and Diversity

Twitter Karn's account.

Lucas (seniortweets were removed shortly after he first saw but he them. screenshots of posts he

According to Lucas' screen-Chairman Steve Lucas said he shots, which spanned nearly a

Karn

Dustin Dove.

University Park Undergraduate Association (UPUA) Internal (senior-secondary education) on at last week's meeting. Twitter.

saw several offensive posts on year, Karn's tweets included account before he was made Jessica Pelliciotta (junior-political derogatory references to the aware of the allegations against Japanese, blacks and homosexu- him. He declined to comment on the language of the posts, and said outgoing he wanted to handle the matter internally.

Karn also said he sent an e-mail Development Chairman, also con- to the UPUA assembly to make all firmed that he saw Karn's original representatives aware of "the sittweets a few months ago when uation." He was appointed to his Karn requested to follow Dove position through an assembly vote

UPUA President Christian Karn (junior-political science) Ragland (junior-political science) said he deleted his Twitter and Chairwoman of the Assembly

If you go

What: UPUA General Assembly Meeting

When: 8 tonight Where: 302 HUB science) said Karn told assembly members that he would answer any questions they had for him at general assembly tonight's See TWEETS. Page 2.

Asit Mishra/Collegian

Mamma Mia! actors perform in Eisenhower Auditorium on Tuesday night. Tickets are still available for tonight and Thursday's performances of the nationally touring production. For complete coverage of Mamma Mia! | www.psucollegian.com

UPAC alters policies

By Kathleen Loughran COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

Tuesday night, the Park Allocation University Committee (UPAC) passed a policy allowing a single honorarium allocation of $20,000, an increase from the previous $12,000 allotment. Honoraria can include any artist, speaker or other group who is brought in for the students. The maximum total amount of money allotted to honoraria payments will remain at $20,000, UPAC Chairman Mark Donovan said.

In addition, Donovan (juniorpolitical science) said the committee closed the "existing loophole" that allowed groups to use negotiations from honoraria costs in their 20 percent contribution to event costs.

Donovan said he felt that Penn State students would like the policy changes because it will help to bring more popular acts to University Park.

"I think that any time that we're going to get better program and better concerts it well received by the students," he said. "It will bring us better See UPAC. Page 2.

Asit Mishra/Collegian

Former UPUA President Gavin Keirans said his biggest regret from his time in office was not reaching out to students enough.

President reflects on two-year term

By Casey McDermott COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

For the past two years, Gavin Keirans' Sundays have hardly been days of rest.

For him, Sundays meant prepping for meetings, de-briefing with other student government leaders and making sure UPUA's plans were lined up for the week

But the former two-term University Park Undergraduate Association (UPUA) president said this mentality of planning ahead — even if the plans didn't always pull through — was a key part of UPUA's progress since he assumed the presidency in 2008. "When I was first elected, we put out a 40-day plan," Keirans (senior-business management)

"In a large part, we didn't reach all of those goals — but it really set the tone that we have to take an aggressive, realistic approach to getting things done.

Since then, Keirans said, he's proud of the accomplishments UPUA was able to tackle with a goal-oriented mentality during his two terms He noted the White Loop Extension, the newly opened Office of Student Legal Services, the Tenant-Landlord Mediation program, the spring music festival, Last Stop, and the revival of

Encampment as major initiatives See KEIRANS, Page 2.

Dorms could forbid alcohol

Alcohol could be banned from primarily freshman dorms under a new proposed policy.

> By Laurie Stern COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

No alcohol in freshman residence halls. No alcohol in any dorms as early as fall 2011.

Those measures and more are being considered in a push to solve the university's drinking problem, according to Penn State administrators.

Vice President for Student Affairs Damon Sims said though residents of freshman dorms are primarily underage students, the proposed policy would no longer allow 21-year-old residents in these dorms, such as resident assistants, to have alcohol in their rooms. The freshman dorm policy would be a small adjustment in a long-term effort to mitigate problems with excessive drinking, he said.

Sims said this policy could take effect as early as the fall 2010 semester, as he has already had conversations about the potential change with administrators and student leaders.

Currently, only students who are 21 or older are permitted to have alcohol in their residence

'Right now you have the complication of sometimes people who are 21 living next to people who are 19," Sims said. "Twentyone-year-olds can have alcohol in their room. Trying to manage all that as it exists right now is much more complicated. If the proposed policy for the freshman dorms passes, further discussions could lead to a blanket policy prohibiting alcohol in all of the residence halls effective as early as fall 2011, he said. "This is a multivariate problem," he said. "It operates on many, many levels. It's one of dozens of steps. An area traditionally inhabited by freshman, East Halls would be largely affected by the proposed policy.

See DORMS, Page 2.

Campus gyms to enforce stricter dress code

By Laurie Stern COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

Though students may be proud of their washboard abs or buns of steel, facility managers say the gym is not the place to show them

Penn State's gym desk attendants and supervisors have been more stringently enforcing a dress code, angering some students who feel they should be free to work out in whatever attire they want.

Beenash Sheikh (senior-kinesiology) has worked as a gym desk attendant for the past two years and said gym staff members have been directed to pay more attention to people's clothing this year to prevent the spread of germs through contact with equipment.

The H1N1 scare in the fall was specifically semester addressed as one reason for taking these precautions, she said. Hand-sanitizing stations were also installed around campus as a further precaution

Eighties-style shirts cut off See GYM, Page 2.

What not to wear

Citing health concerns, campus gyms have prohibited off-shoulder T-shirts and deep-cut muscle tanks.

Source: Chip Harrison, Director of Strength and Fitnes

Jaclyn McKay/Collegian