performance at the contest over the air, but visitors to Tussey Mountain can also enter by registering the QWIK Rock booth at the weekly events.

In addition to potentially being selected to enter the wing-eating contest, registering with QWIK Rock also gives visitors to Wing Fest the chance to win a 40" TV from Paul and Tony's Stereo, 1321 S. Atherton St., Stapleford said.

4thFEST, PLUS CHICKEN

With one event already in the books, this year's Wing Fest is set to draw in a record crowd from all over Central Pennsylvania.

"There's a lot of Penn State students that come out, but it's just as much of a local event — literally all walks of life attend," Hume said. "It ends up being this really fun party that's fun for kids and adults."

There will be a liquor tent at Wing Fest for visitors 21 and older, but the entire event is open for visitors of all ages, Hume said.

Whether visitors come to eat, drink or enjoy the music, Wing Fest is set to cater to everyone's tastes with a variety of food and music that will rival other State College summer festivals.

"The different food, the way Wing Fest is set up — everything seems to be improved," Stapleford said.

The multitudes of food options and live entertainment at the Tussey Mountain Wing Fest Challenge promise to be a celebration, Hume said.

"That's the mood we're looking to create," she said.
