psucollegian.com

@dailycollegian

Vol. 111 No. 38

Thursday, Sopt

20 cents off campus

Big Ten divides 12

By Audrey Snyder COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

The Big Ten took its next step beyond expansion Wednesday evening by announcing the divisional breakdowns for the conference. will start conference play in 2011, the conference established two football-only divi-

Penn State will be a part of division X, which includes Ohio State, Wisconsin, Purdue, Indiana and Illinois.

Nebraska, Michigan, Michigan State, age | SPORTS, Page 11.

Iowa, Northwestern and Minnesota.

The alignment of the two divisions ensures the winners of each division will square off in a conference championship game, which will be in 2011 at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis.

Divisions were determined on competi-With the addition of Nebraska, which tive fairness first, rivalry games second third, and geography Big Commissioner Jim Delany said.

With each team having a protected crossover game — meaning it will play one See BIG TEN, Page 2.

The other division, division O, includes For more Big Ten conference football cover-

A Conference Divided

The Big Ten divided its 12 teams into two divisions, putting Penn State in the X division.

Division O Division X Penn State Michigan Nebraska Ohio State Iowa Wisconsin Purdue Michigan State Northwestern Illinois Indiana Minnesota

Source: Big Ten Network

Joanna Wynar/Collegian

Kelsey Morris/Collegian

Matisyahu, an orthodox Jewish reggae rapper, performs on the HUB lawn at the Jewish Life Festival Wednesday night.

Matisyahu leads Jewish Festival

By David Strader COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

If the echoes of beat-boxing didn't already lure concertgoers in, the smell of kosher hot dogs did the job as Matisyahu performed a free acoustic set Wednesday night on the HUB lawn.

The acoustic show — part of the Jewish Life Festival — kept things simple, with just vocalist the Chabad Jewish Student Matthew Paul Miller, known commonly by his Hebrew name, Matisyahu, and accompanying guitarist D.P. Holmes onstage.

Gabriel Roy (freshman-division of undergraduate studies) said Matisyahu's live performance exceeded album quality.

"It was amazing listening to Regardless of religious or culhim live," he said. "I have his live tural background, though, Ian pared to this."

album, but that's nothing com-

Michael Solomon, a member of Organization, which ran the festival, said Matisyahu was an ideal than performer for the event.

"There are a lot of Jewish peoplays, we all feel it on a personal level," Solomon (senior-accounting) said.

Weissman said Matisyahu's performance offered something for everyone.

would

you expect,"

Weissman (junior-history) said.

As attendees listened to ple here and when Matisyahu Matisyahu's reggae and rap, they could munch on kosher hot dogs, have their names written by a Jewish scribe, or make their own challah bread and shofar horns.

When Matisyahu took the stage, though, it became clear he was the night's main event.

The rapper started off his per-"I think the message behind his formance by beat-boxing - one of music is a lot more universal the skills he's best known for. See FESTIVAL, Page 2.

Collegian general manager chosen

By Brendan McNally COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

After more than a yearlong search, The Daily Collegian's Board of Directors selected Patricia Hartranft as its new general manager Wednesday night. Hartranft — who has been working at the organization for 40 years — said it's important for the organization to concentrate on ager is the news- Hartranft the future. She said she's eager to paper's highest students achieve their goals. "I think my goals are the student's goals, Hartranft said after the meeting. "I see the general manager as a facilitator. The students are the creative force.'

General mancontinue helping the Collegian's professional position.

Gerry resigned in September 2009 and evidence.

Hartranft became interim gener-

Hamilton said his decision to Harvey, who Hamilton fired in Collegian. May 2009 citing insubordination.

The Collegian's Board of value Directors reinstated Harvey in

The position became vacant July 2009 after determining that when former Collegian general Hamilton's decision to fire him Hamilton was not supported with enough

Board President Ty Strohl said Hartranft has been working at The Daily Collegian in several difleave the job was influenced by ferent positions for 40 years, a the reinstatement of Daily tenure he said proves her tenure he said proves her Collegian News Adviser John experience and loyalty to the

> "The board certainly saw the in her service and See MANAGER, Page 2.

Lions pick frosh

Bolden to open as QB

By Andrew J. Cassavell COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

In his 60 years at Penn State, Joe Paterno hasn't been too fond of freshman quarterbacks.

Robert Bolden is the excep-He'll become the first true freshman in the Paterno era to start the season as quarterback, when the Nittany Lions host State Youngstown Saturday. The Orchard Lake, Mich., native emerged from one of the most hotly contested quarterback races in recent memory, beating out sophomores Matt McGloin and Kevin Newsome, but all three are still expected to see time.

Bolden will be the first freshman quarterback to start a game since Wally Richardson in 1992. Tony Sacca, four years earlier in 1988, was the only other true freshman to start since Paterno arrived as an assistant coach in 1950.

'When he decided to go to Penn State, he thought he could go there and compete," said Don Buchanan, Bolden's high school quarterbacks coach. "He just wanted to go there with a chance to compete, and he worked hard."

Bolden arrived at Penn State in mid-May and began taking classes one day after graduating from St. Mary's Prep. Unlike Jones, he was unable to enroll early because of high school restrictions, but Buchanan said all Bolden did during the summer "was go to class, work out and study the playbook."

Despite the obvious historical significance of Paterno's decision to start Bolden, his high school head coach, George Porritt, noted the job is certainly not locked up for an extended period of time.

"If he doesn't play well, there's another young man ready to play, too," Porritt said. "He See QUARTERBACK, Page 2.

True freshman Robert Bolden will start as quarterback at this Saturday's game.

Fraternity combines gay community and greek life

Courtesy of Brendon Wall Delta Lamba Phi hopes to increase pledges this year.

Series note: This is the fourth in a five-part series offering a closer look at the rushing process.

> By Vera Greene COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

Fraternities often market themselves as groups that offer brotherhood and friendship, but Delta Lambda Phi goes further by offering something different a fraternity that saves lives.

Known as the "gay-friendly" fraternity, Delta Lambda Phi aims to be more than that label might suggest, said Julian Haas, the fraternity's pledge-

"This fraternity is for every guy in high school who felt like they had no one else to turn to," Haas (junior-sociology) said. "It's for the guy contemplating suicide or substance abuse — this organization provides an alternative and it literally saves lives.'

Haas, who said it's "okay to be gay and greek," hopes to see a boost in new pledges this year. Usually 15 people attend each rush event, Delta Lambda Phi President Brendon Wall said.

Ideally, the brothers would like to see up to 40 new people, he said.

See FRATERNITY, Page 2.

