Why the Immigration Bill Should be Vetoed by Wilson

the foremost American newspapers as "a lazy man's test."
The same newspaper, (The New York Tribune), voicing the sentiments of all fair-minded Americans further says of that test:

"It sets up no fair or just standard of eligibility. It is not based on character, bodily health, capacity for labor, sobriety or any other of the qualifications which are of real importance in those who do the sort of work which falls to the average alien immigrant. A literacy examination does not exclude the knave, the idler or the parasite."

Finally, in the case of the Italians residing in the United States, the "test" is objected to on the ground of discrimination against their own race, as shown in the House Committee Report accompanying the Burnett Bill. The Italian immigrant is the only one pointed out in that report in such a way as to show that the most objectionable clause in the bill is intended against him alone.

Further proof of the race discrimination underlying the "literacy test" was given in the Senate, when Chairman Smith of the Immigration Commission, opposing an amendment to exempt from the test immigrants persecuted for racial prejudices, stated that "such an amendment would nullify the entire test clause."

Any one of the above stated reasons would have justified an adverse vote on the bill in either branch of Congress and all of them should constitute sufficient ground for President Wilson's veto.

With immigration at its lowest ebb and the certainty that the present war will ultimately stop it altogether by opening in Europe a vast and most promising market for European labor, there is no excuse for such legislation as the so-called Smith-Burnett Bill and the Nation's Executive should deny it his sanction in justice to American fairness and common sense.

Youth Shot by Du Bois Policeman

Stahl saw someone in the offices from the street and a few minutes later passed J. E. DuBois, Jr. When asked if he had been in the office Mr. DuBois replied in the negative and added that no one had been left in the office. The two at once hurried to the office building and started through.

The youth, who had ransacked several of the office rooms, heard them coming and jumped through an open window. Stahl saw him and gave chase across the bottom and adjoining the fair ground. The officer repeatedly ordered the fugitive to halt, but the boy paid no attention and finally Stahl fired, the bullet striking the boy in the back and lodging in his abdomen. He struggled on despite his wound and it was not until after he was securely handcuffed that the officer discovered he was wounded. He was hurried to the DuBois hospital, where he is now in a critical condition.

The officer maintains that he did not intend to shoot the fugitive. That he fired to the side merely to scare him to submission and as he did so Capassi stumbled into the path of the bullet.

The boy has had a checkered career. Arrested by Chief of Police Palmer after committing several robberies at Dayton he was sentenced to Morganza. Several months later he managed to escape and returned to Punxsutawney, where he robbed the W. S. Dinsmore store. He was again arrested by Chief Palmer and returned to Morganza. Two months ago he escaped for the second time and his whereabouts was unknown until last night.

His parents reside in Rossiter. —Punxsutawney Spirit, Jan. 1.
