Indiana People Busy Cleaning and Decorating for Centennial

The Time for Indiana's Big Celebration Is Rapidly Approaching and Elaborate Preparations Are Now Being Made by the Citizens.

Indiana folk are very busy this week in cleaning, painting and decorating. The time of celebrating its jubilee is rapidly approaching.

Thursday morning the decorators, who came here early in the week started their work of putting up white columns on top of pedestals along Philadelphia street. The Street Railway Co. is repairing several bad places in the paving of Main and North Seventh street.

Godfrey Marshall is having his business block painted and the facade on Main street will have a

New York Militiamen Show How Quickly They Can Mobilize

In order to show New Yorkers and others how quickly the national guardsmen could be assembled in case of necessity, nearly 10,000 of the citizen soldiers mobilized in record time at the Sheepshead Bay speedway to take part in the battle problem which they were to work out in the presence of Major General John F. O'Ryan and some 8,000 spectators at the military and naval tournament. But the exercises were interrupted when it was announced that, owing to complaint of the Kings County Observance league against the breaking of certain "blue laws," there could be no noise in the mimic war. Blank cartridges for rifle and cannon were taboo, drums, bugles and bands were forbidden, and no aeroplane was allowed to fly, with its noisy exhaust. And, acting under orders from General O'Ryan, the guard obeyed the law so carefully that the only noise the watchers heard during the whole "fight" was the crack, crack, crack of the rifles and the zig of bullets in a shooting gallery near by that ran merrily through it all. The pictures show: No. 1, practice with field guns; No. 2, anti-air craft gun on exhibition; No. 3, Colonel Conelius Vanderbilt, millionaire and national guard officer and enthusiast; No. 4, auto towing two field guns.

Nominating Speeches to Be Made Today

Chicago, Ill., June 9—Unless Col. Theodore Roosevelt eliminates himself as a candidate for president, any peace between the Republican and Progressive parties is decidedly impossible.

This was the judgment of the leaders of the Republican party when its convention reassembled here early this morning.

The Progressive party committee has agreed that there would be no trouble on getting together on any question of policy. But it insisted that Colonel Roosevelt was the man to lead the fight of a reunited party.
