

Journey? It is obvious that, whatever was their will to come, they had not the means. If absolute proof of this was required, it will be found in the fact that their eating was provided for them in mass; why and for what services to be rendered it will be for their introducers to explain.

Fruits of Know Nothingism.

The organization of men into secret bodies, affiliated by oaths of mutual support, and professing to act against the great body of the people, for the purpose of controlling the government and the administration of the laws, is an evil that produces nothing but disastrous fruits, and that continually.

It selects men for office in darkness, and it carries them in, not by public discussion, but by secret combination. It seeks and had men resort to this machinery to attain place; but, when they attain position, they still find themselves hampered and involved by the secret combination to which they are attached, and paralyzed by its superior will.

It will be seen that the mob of Louisville, while silent, claimed "as Americans the right to rule America," and who shot down in the street, fired the whistles, and murdered the wives and children of "Paddies and Dutchmen" with impunity, have tried their hands at a new assumption of law. Read the account of the horrid burning of the black prisoners in that city.

One of the journals of that city speaking of the affair, says gravely: "Several shots were fired, and the force within returned them by the discharge of their cartridges. The fire was so close that the mob became infuriated and maddened the already infuriated mob."

The mob were of course encouraged by this salvo of blank cartridges. If they had been public benefactors, about to be received with a military salute, it would have taken just that form. But the source of their evil inspiration lies deeper. The Cincinnati Enquirer says: "The wholesale murders and burnings during the Know Nothing mobs have been passed over without an attempt to punish any of the guilty. Indeed, they have been defended and justified. Political passions have blinded the people to their interests, their duty, and their obligation to the laws, to the country, and to justice. There has been a disposition to forget these infamous events, to pass over without an effort to inquire into the facts and vindicate the law, to patch up a hollow truce between the mobocracy and the authorities, to close the wounds without healing them. The inevitable effects of this cowardly policy are exhibited in the terrible scenes which have, during the last week, disgraced that city. Unpunished murder and violence are every where to be seen. There is nothing more difficult to arrest than a mob which has once received the sanction of those whose duty it is to suppress it. There is nothing easier to check and prevent in this country than these lawless displays, when they are properly met. One successful mob inflicts a greater injury upon a community than war, pestilence, or famine. New Orleans never suffered half as much by the great epidemic of 1853 as she did from the election mobs of 1855. The cholera was but a light visitation to Louisville, compared with the horrors of Bloody Monday."

Little children were part of the mob—boys of ten or twelve years of age, who joined in the cry of "kill 'em, kill 'em," and who helped to light the bonfires under the hanging victims.

Desperate homicide.—Arrest of the perpetrator.—On Saturday evening, shortly before eight o'clock, the rioters of the north-western section of the city were startled by the announcement of a fatal case of shooting which had been perpetrated at the National Gardens, Biddle street, opposite Welsh street, kept by William Stanley. The victim of the horrible affair was Wm. G. Walters, porter in the United States public store, and the perpetrator a man named George Braden, foreman on the Baltimore and Susquehanna Railroad. It appears that several persons were gathered in the house, and at about shortly after dusk Walters came in, walked up to the oyster box, asked for some paper and having obtained it, walked out and went down the yard. Immediately after Mr. Stanley hearing an altercation, ran out and saw Walters and Braden apparently just separated from a scuffle. Mr. Stanley went up to Braden and took him by the shoulder, when he (Braden) drew a revolver and presented it at Stanley, who fell to escape the shot, and Walters springing to the left side the pistol was aimed and fired at him, two balls lodging in his back, gashing from his wounds, fell and died five minutes after the occurrence. The firing had collected a crowd of people to the spot, and when the dreadful result became known, the greatest excitement prevailed throughout the neighborhood.

He leaves a wife and six children.—Braden immediately or soon after the commission of the deed escaped from the city, but was taken into custody on Saturday night at 11 o'clock, near the Woodbury Factory, by officer Rathbun of the western district, assisted by Sergeant Alrey and officer Henry. When challenged he drew a large knife on the officers, but was thrown down and handcuffed. He was yesterday brought to the city and committed to jail by Justice Bixler, to await the action of the grand jury.—Balt. Sun of Monday.

Secret of Walker's Surrender.

In referring the other day to the first brief accounts via New Orleans, of Walker's surrender in Nicaragua, with his 500th men, to Capt. Davis, of the United States sloop of war St. Mary's, we remarked that it was "to be presumed that there were some preliminaries to the arrangement by which Walker was brought off by a United States vessel, of which we may learn more hereafter." There seemed to be a significance in the fact of the forces of our government stepping in just at the moment when Walker was apparently in his last desperate strait, and we find in a lengthy report, written by Gen. Henningsen, one of the filibuster commanders, on board of the St. Mary's, at San Juan del Sur, May 2d, a passage which indicates that this step was not taken by Capt. Davis until authorized (very discreetly) by the politicians who are inclined to think from "headquarters." The report is addressed to "His Excellency, Gen. Wm. Walker, Commander-in-Chief and President of Nicaragua," and doubtless contains the version which Walker designs to give of his retreat. It appears that Capt. Davis addressed a letter to Walker on the 30th of April, stating that he was aware of his desperate and forlorn position, and offered, from humanity, to interfere in his behalf, and stated that he was authorized, in case of his (Walker's) capitulation, to guarantee his personal safety and the safe removal of all under his command. He also offered to take Walker to Panama in the St. Mary's, and stated that General Mora (the Costa Rican commander-in-chief) consented to suspend hostilities. To this letter Walker replied that Captain Davis's propositions were too vague, and requested a personal interview. Whereupon Capt. Davis wrote to express his surprise, concluding by declining to go to Livias. The same day Walker sent a reply, stating that he agreed to suspend hostilities. He proposed to send two officers to Capt. Davis to treat, provided they could have safe conduct, to his camp. Davis responded by sending his Capt. and Walker appointed Gen. Henningsen and Col. Waters as commissioners to negotiate with Capt. Davis. General Henningsen in his report says that he informed Captain Davis that the entertaining of such a proposition would depend on Gen. Walker being satisfied with regard to the evacuation of the river by Colonel Lockridge and his command, as their principal motive for holding Rivas until the last moment was the fear that he might arrive and find it occupied by the "enemy." But with regard to their position being desperate, he could break through the enemy's lines and march in any direction and embark either at San Juan or at some other point on the coast, on his schooner Granada, which had on board two six-pounders and a store of arms, cartridges, powder, ammunition and lead. And here in the significant answer as related by Henningsen: "On this Captain Davis remarked that he must at once inform me that it was his unalterable determination not to allow the schooner Granada to leave the port, and to take possession of her provisions, to his sailing from San Juan del Sur, which must take place in a few days; that he was acting on instructions from his superiors—frankly his commander-in-chief; that since the outgoing of the late administration at Washington, instructions had been received from the new, which contained nothing to induce him to alter the course which he intended to pursue; but that he preferred that I would consider all as said, and that you would consider him as acting on his own and sole responsibility. I remarked that his resolution was a most important one, and would probably prove a determining fact."

With regard to the evacuation of the San Juan river by Col. Lockridge and his command, he said "that he had entirely satisfied himself of the fact." Hence the surrender.

Walker no sooner gets safely to New Orleans, through the interposition of an officer of the American navy, than he announces, or his friends do for him, that he intends, in thirty-six days, to go back to the country which he has despoiled, with plenty of men and means, to reconquer the scenes from the perilous consequences of which he could never have escaped, except through the aid of our government officers. This, of course, is insolent bravado, trying to put a good face upon defeat.—Balt. Sun.

The Washington Riot.—Meeting of the Plug Uglies, Know Nothings and Other Hiders. WASHINGTON, June 2.—A meeting of the rioters was held this evening, in front of the City Hall, for the purpose of denouncing the course of the Mayor, as well as the Executive authority exercised yesterday. The speakers were General McCalla, Dr. Clayton, and a Councilman by the name of Lloyd, all Know Nothings. These worthies endeavored to shift the responsibility of the loss of life from the shoulders of their friends, but the meagre attendance this evening gives them little hope of successfully doing so.

Mr. Lloyd, after a great deal of talk about "sacred rights of the people," which his party are notorious for disregarding, and about the "laws of order," advised his hearers to be prepared for the next attack, which advice very naturally elicited much applause.

A committee of two from each ward was there appointed to prepare resolutions and call an adjourned meeting after inquiries on all the victims have been concluded. Inquests have already been had in two of the cases. Measures will be taken to bring the matter to a judicial investigation, and it is to be hoped that the guilty offenders will be properly punished—particularly that detestable portion of them who visited your city last fall—the Plug Uglies.

Governor Walker's Inaugural Address to the People of Kansas.—St. Louis, June 3.—Gov. Walker's Inaugural Address to the People of Kansas, has been received. It is a long, conciliatory and persuasive document. It recognizes all Territorial enactments, and says all constitutional laws shall be executed. It urges all parties to participate in the election, and believes the Convention will make a Constitution to suit the people; and does not believe that Congress will reject it. It earnestly impressed the necessity of removing the slavery agitation from the halls of Congress, and Presidential elections; and says slavery will be ultimately determined by the law of climate. It is not this law now operating for and against Slavery in Kansas.

In the great that Slavery does not exist in Kansas, it says she has constitutional duties to her sister States, especially to Missouri, and trusts that the Constitution will contain clauses forever securing to that State all the constitutional guarantees, both by Federal and State authority of the supremacy within her own limits, by the authority of the Supreme Court of the United States. It says that if this question is decided peacefully for Kansas, an immediate career of sure progress and prosperity, unsurpassed by history, awaits her; but that if violence, injustice and fraud reign, history may be compelled to record the fact that Kansas was the grave of the American Union.
