The Poet's Corner.

John Anderson, My Jo.
This exquisite ballad, constructed by Robert Burns out of a different and somewhat exceptional lyric, has always left something to be wished for and regretted; it is not complete. But who would venture to add to a song of Burns? As Burns left it, it runs thus:

John Anderson, my Jo,
When we were first acquainted,
Your locks were like the raven,
Your bonnie brow was bent;
But now your brow is bald, John,
Your locks are like the snow;
But blessings on your frosty pow,
John Anderson, my Jo.

John Anderson, my Jo,
We clamb the hill together;
And now a canny day, John,
We've had wae anither;
Now we maun part, John,
But sorrow has naught to do,
And sleep together at the foot,
John Anderson, my Jo.

Fine as this is, it does not quite satisfy a contemplative mind; when one has gone so far, he looks and longs for something more—something beyond the foot of the hill. Many a reader of Burns must have felt this; and it is quite probable that many have attempted to supply the deficiency; but we know of only one success in so hazardous an experiment. This is the added verse:

John Anderson, my Jo,
When we have slept together,
The sleep that's meane sleep, John,
We'll wake wae anither;
And in the better said, John,
Nae sorrow shall we know;
Nor fear we'er shall part again,
John Anderson, my Jo.

Simple, touching, true—nothing wanting, and nothing to spare; precisely harmonizing with the original stanza, and improving them by the fact of completing them. This poetical achievement is attributed to Mr. Charles Gould, a gentleman of our town, whose life has been chiefly devoted to the successful combination of figures—but not figures of rhetoric.—Home Journal.

Short Miscellany.

HOME.
"This is my home," cried a little one, a treasured boy of four summers, as fresh and rosy he came in from school, at the close of a short winter afternoon.

"Indeed, little Willie," said his mother's visitor, "how is it? Suppose you go out on the sidewalk and try the next door; suppose you step into the entry; throw off your little sack as you have here, and proceed to the parlor—wouldn't that be your home?"

"No, indeed," said Willie "that wouldn't be it."
"But tell me why not?"
"Willie had never thought of this—He paused for a moment, then directing his eyes to where his mother sat quietly sewing, he replied with an earnest gesture.

"She lives here."

Tunnel between England and France.
Some years ago a French engineer, M. Thome de Gamond, published a plan for uniting England and France by means of a tunnel beneath the sea, from Bologne to Dover. We learn from Paris that the Emperor of the French regards such a tunnel as both desirable and practicable, and that by his order M. de Gamond's plan was referred to a commission of government civil engineers, all eminent men. This commission, after examining the scheme in all its details, have come to the conclusion that it is feasible, and ought to be seriously entertained, and it has recommended the government to disburse $2,000,000 for the purpose of making new investigations respecting it.—The same commission recommended that the English government should be requested to say if it is disposed to take any part in those investigations.

A Duck Whipping an Eagle.—A large bald eagle pounced upon a sturdy Muscovy drake, on Thursday evening, at Mr. John Dwyer's farm in Prince George county. Was in order to make a meal of him, but the drake, not relishing such an unceremonious call, put his muscular energies into very active exercise, and made so scientific a use of them as to give his feathered majesty a sound drubbing—whereupon the latter determined not to "mount upwards" again with an empty stomach, made a vigorous attack upon one of the lady ducks of the yard, who was fortunately rescued from the talons of the hungry and savage bird before she sustained any injury. It was decidedly one of the most filibustering enterprises that we have heard of for a long time. The eagle narrowly escaped capture, and he will not again, we imagine, undertake another expedition of the kind.

At medical men unite in declaring that nothing is more beneficial to health than hearty laughter; and surely our benevolent creator would not have provided, and made it a source of health and enjoyment to use it, and then have made it a sin to do so. The prevailing temper of the mind should be cheerful, yet cautious; but there are times when relaxation and enjoyment are proper for all.

An Albany paper says—"We once saw a lady lectured so tight, that, while stopping to pick up a pin, her stays gave way, and she turned three somersaults."

A THEATRICAL INCIDENT.

Some years ago the manager of a "well regulated Theatre" somewhere along the Erie Canal, engaged a good looking and brisk young lady as a supernumerary. It happened that the young lady in question had formerly officiated in some capacity as a "hand" on board a canal boat, a fact which she was extremely anxious to conceal. She evinced much anxiety to master the details of her newly chosen profession, and soon exhibited a more than ordinary degree of comic talent. She was duly promoted and in time became a general favorite with both manager and the public.

One night when she was announced to appear in a favorite part, a couple of boatmen found their way into the parlor near the foot lights, particularly anxious to see the now famous comedienne. The house was crowded, and after the subsidence of general applause which greeted her appearance one of the boatmen slapped his companion on the shoulder, and with an emphatic expletive exclaimed, loud enough to be heard over half the house:

"Bill, I know that gal!"
"Pshaw! dry up!"
"But I'm d-d if I don't now, Bill. It's Sul Flunkins, as sure as you're born. She's old Flunkins' daughter, that used to run the Injured Polly, and she used to sail with him."

"Tom," said Bill, "you're a fool, and if you don't stop your infernal clack you'll be put out. Sul Flunkins! You must know a sight if you think that's her!"

Tom was silenced, but not convinced. He watched the actress in all her motions with intense interest, and ere long broke out again.

"I tell ye, Bill, that's her—I know 'tis. You can't fool me—I know her too well!"

Bill, who was a good deal interested in the play, was out of all patience at the persistent interruption on the part of Tom, and gave him a tremendous nudge in the ribs with his elbow as an emphatic hint for him to "keep quiet."

Tom without minding the admonition, said, "You just wait—I'll fix her; keep your eye on me!"

Sure enough he did fix her. Watching his opportunity when the actress was deeply absorbed in her part, he sung out in a voice which rang through the galleries:

"Low Bridge!"
From force of habit, the actress instantly and involuntarily, ducked her head, to avoid the anticipated collision. Down came the house with a perfect thunder of applause at this "palpable hit," high above which Tom's voice could be heard, as he returned Bill's punch in the ribs with interest—

"Didn't I tell ye, old boy. I know'd 'twas her. You couldn't fool me!"
Buffalo Express.

The Married Man.—How is it that girls can always tell a married man from a single one? The fact is indisputable. The philosophy of it is beyond our ken. Blackwood says that "the fact of matrimony or batchelorship is written so legibly in a man's appearance, that no ingenuity can conceal it. Everywhere there is some inexplicable instinct that tells us whether an individual (whose name, fortune and circumstances are totally unknown) be, or be not, a married man. Whether it is in a certain subdued look, such as that which characterizes the lions in a menagerie, and distinguishes them from the lords of the desert, we cannot tell; but that the truth is so, we positively affirm."

A Thick Head.—A duel was fought at Calaveras, Cal., a few days previous to the sailing of the last steamer, between two colored "gemen." After the first shot, the officers of the law interfered, and arrested the parties. During the trial before the Magistrate, one of the duellists discovered a small hole in the top of his head, and upon examination it was ascertained that the bullet from his adversary's pistol had entered the cranium a short distance and flattened, but had not reached the brain.

Great Drought in Germany.—The N. York Sun says: "Accounts from the Hartz mountains state that the district of Chasthal is suffering from an unprecedented dearth of water; the natives had left off washing their hands and faces more than once a week, and the authorities of the place have imposed a fine of two thalers on all laundresses who persist in pursuing their trade."—Great quantities of cattle were dying from thirst, and a few of the community, who are unable to forego cleanliness, use beer to perform their ablutions."

Snails vs. Oysters.—The consumption of snails in Paris has increased to such an extent as to seriously injure the oyster trade. A wholesale of the new fish market is devoted to these delicacies.

A RAILWAY JOKE.

During the severe cold of last winter I had occasion to make a journey to the West by rail. The road was in shocking order, having settled in many places in such a way as to recall to the bruised and battered travellers vivid reminiscences of the corduroy roads of the olden time. One night, as most of us had succeeded, after long effort, in getting into a dose, we suddenly came upon one of these "rough places," and were jolted and tossed about as such a rate as to put at defiance all further efforts to sleep. "This cold weather is bad for the track," muttered one of the weary ones thus unceremoniously aroused. "I don't know about the track," growled out another in the corner, "but it's devilish bad for the sleepers."

"Whatever you do, do it willingly. A boy that is wipped to school, never learns his lesson well. A man that is compelled to work, cares not how badly it is performed. If that pulls off his coat cheerfully, strips up his sleeves in earnest, and sings while he works, is the man for me.

A cheerful spirit gets on quick; A grumbler in the mud will stick."

Some of the papers "down east" have been greatly exercised lately by the fight northward of an immense flock of geese, in the shape of a V, betokening severe weather. We should think anything in the shape of a V or an X would be acceptable in those times.

"Do you know Mr. —?" asked one friend of another, referring to an old gentleman who was remarkable for his attachment to the juice of the hop.

"Yes, sir, I know him very well," was the reply.

"What kind of a man is he?"
"Why, in the morning, when he gets up, he is a bear barrel, and at night when he goes to bed, he is a barrel of beer."

Resignation.—A certain old lady, who has been famed for sour looks, and not very sweet words, touching the accidents of life, was observed to become very amiable. "What happy change has come over you?" said a neighbor.

"Why," said the transformed, "to tell you the truth, I have been all my life striving for a contented mind, and have finally concluded to sit down contented with it."

Durance Sweet.—A wag gets off the following in the Boston Post:
"Give me a copy of those lines,"
Sues the fair Celia to her poet lover;
Delighted, he the sheet resigns—
His cup of bliss quite full, is running over.

Fortwith she hides the paper prize Safe in her bosom's ladybird of lace; He marks the imprisonment and cries, "My lines, in truth, have fallen in pleasant places."

Modesty.—A modest young lady desiring a leg of a chicken at the table said:
"I'll take the part which ought to be dressed in drawers!"
A young gentleman opposite immediately said:
"I'll take the part which ought to wear the bustle!"
Hartshorn was immediately administered to the lady.

"John," said a master to his head apprentice, as he was about starting on a short journey, "you must occupy my place while I am absent."

"Thank you, sir," demurely replied John, "but I'd rather sleep with the boys."

"Harry, did you ask Hicks for the money?"
"Yes sir-ee."
"What did he say?"
"Nothing, he just kicked me into the road. That's all he said."

Alcohol was first invented and used to stain the cheeks of the ladies of Arabia, 950 years ago. It is still used for the same purpose, but is confined more particularly to the other sex.

Read the biographies of our great and good men—not one of them had a fashionable mother. They nearly all sprang from plain, strong-minded women, who had about as little to do with the fashions as with the changing clouds.

DON'T KICK HIM.

Hon. Henry Wilson, Senator from Massachusetts, according to present appearances, will not be returned to the Senate. Wilson appreciates this state of things; hence he has commenced blustering and bullying in Congress, in order, it is understood, to get kicked or caulked—Sanctioned—and by that secure a re-election, after the manner of his broken-headed colleague. The anti-Wilsonites of Massachusetts therefore appeal to fire-eaters, in fact to all mankind, not to strike, beat, kick, maltreat, or in any way molest the aforesaid champion of freedom, for, if they do, he will be re-elected to the United States Senate in spite of thunder, and that would be doing them a great despite.—They don't want the Sumner dodge played over again. The only thing that can save Wilson, Banks & Co. from defeat in Massachusetts next year will be a row of that kind; and nothing would gratify them more than to see it take place. It would be a god-send to them.—Troy Daily Budget.

FRAUDS!

A bomb-shell was thrown into the Republican ranks by Gov. Bigler, near the close of the discussion in the U. S. Senate, last Thursday week. Mr. Wilson, of Massachusetts, had been indulging in the most unrestrained allegations of fraud at the elections, on the part of the friends of the Lecompton Constitution, in Kansas. Mr. Bigler arose, at the conclusion of this tirade, and stated that he had before him the official returns of the vote in Kansas, for delegates to Congress last October, and also the official vote against the Constitution on the 4th of January. They exhibited a few singular facts which he desired the Senator from Massachusetts to explain. It appeared by these returns, that while the Republicans of Leavenworth City polled less than 700 votes for Mr. Parrott, their candidate for Congress last October, they had given nearly 1400 against the Constitution in January. Another extraordinary fact was, that in Shawnee, where Mr. Parrott had 749 votes and Mr. Ransom had 61, making it all 810, 1720 votes had been cast against the Constitution. In Doniphan and Brown counties the vote against the Constitution is almost double that given for Mr. Parrott, having increased from about 500 to near 1000. Mr. Wilson did not attempt an explanation; in fact, he could not. The fraud was too palpable. In those districts alone it is evident about 2000 illegal votes were cast against the Constitution in January.

UNITED BROTHERS CONFERENCE.

The Pennsylvania Conference of United Brethren in Christ was recently held in Windsor township, York county—Bishop Grossbreiner in the chair. Ex-Bishop J. Erb was elected assistant chairman and W. B. Raber secretary. A collection for missions was taken up and $1,000 contributed. The conference has 70 frontier and foreign missions, and about an equal number of home-missions. Alexander Tripner and Isaac Weidner were ordained to the office of elder in the church. The following are the appointments for the current year:

Z. A. Colestock, presiding elder—Greenacres Circuit, James M. Bishop and S. L. Minnich; Chambersburg Station, W. B. Raber; Murrenberg Circuit, J. Crider; Kockey Spring Circuit, S. Enteline and J. L. Fetterhoff; Big Spring Circuit, J. C. Weidner and J. F. Bishop; Carlisle Circuit, J. W. Burd; Perry Circuit, J. Comes; Path Valley Circuit, Wm. Owen; Schoep's Station, J. Dickson and J. Hummel; Liverpool Circuit, J. Hays; York Station, J. Smith; Baltimore Station, H. Stroup; Baltimore Mission, N. Altman; Philadelphia Station, G. W. Showman; Lancaster City Station, W. Hamberger; York Circuit, S. S. Wertz and J. B. Jones; Manchester Circuit, H. Brown; Hanover Circuit, Alex. Tripner; York Springs, J. G. Shoof and F. Grim. A. Owen, editor of the Christian Repository and Ladies' Magazine, Dayton, Ohio.

The marriage of the Prince Frederick William, of Prussia, and the Princess Royal, of England, took place on the 24th ult., according to the programme previously published, and the event was made the occasion of a grand holiday throughout the kingdom. Immense crowds thronged the streets of London, and the most unbounded enthusiasm prevailed. After the ceremony, the youthful bride gave way to her feelings, and wept in the arms of her royal mother. The young couple departed immediately for Windsor, where they were drawn to the Castle by the Eton boys, amid the most enthusiastic cheering. In the evening the Queen gave a grand concert in Buckingham Palace. The principal streets of London, and all the public buildings, were brilliantly illuminated in honor of the event.

The house where the Burdell murder was committed is now tenanted. A dentist has taken the very rooms occupied by Burdell, and does a very good business in advertising the fact. He seems to think that the notoriety of the place will give it a popularity which it would not otherwise have had. Mrs. Cunningham and her daughters are still living in the city, in 23d street. The current rumor that the older daughter is to be married soon, is yet credited.

If he prayed, who was without sin, how much more is the sinner bound to pray? And I'll be watching through the whole night, prayed with continual supplication, that I might be able to do better than I have done.

EVERY WORD TRUE.

The Chambersburg Valley Spirit, in an article on the Kansas question, has a number of well-put points, which we extract, and endorse. It says:

Mr. BUCHANAN had no share in bringing Kansas so prominently before the public, and he can have no ambition but to dispose of her in the mode best calculated to promote the peace and prosperity of the country. The Nation demanded his services at a time of life when the Presidency had in a great measure lost its attractions for him.—In accepting his high trust, he announced that he would lay it down at the close of a single term. He has, therefore, no personal ends to subserv to the detriment of the public. His interests are identical with the interests of the country; and if he has any ambition, it must be to live in history as a Chief Magistrate who did all that in him lay to render his country prosperous and happy, and to bind its several States together with links of affection too strong to be broken. His claim to the confidence of his countrymen is usually strong, and nothing short of a flagrant dereliction of duty on his part would justify them in withholding from him their cordial support. The Democrat, especially, who fails to sustain him, will need to make out a strong case to justify his own course to "the sober second thought of the people."

And what say the numerous admirers of Gen. Cass? Is he the man to sanction such a "villainous contrivance" as the Lecompton Constitution is said to be by the few Democratic papers that have espoused the Abolition side of the Kansas question? Does anybody believe that the old patriot would close his political career and tarnish his great reputation by attempting to "force a fraudulent Constitution upon an unwilling people?" Gen. Cass has lived more than "three score years and ten"; his life has been spent in the service of his country, and he has made himself a name that is known and respected throughout the civilized world. What ambition can he have, expecting, as he must, soon to be called from the scenes of earth, but to do his duty to the country he has loved and served so long and so well?

And let us ask the Democracy of Pennsylvania, but more especially the Democracy of Franklin county, whether they think that Judge BLACK would favor the admission of Kansas under the Lecompton Constitution, if that Constitution had not been lawfully made? It is not claiming too much for Judge BLACK, and perhaps it is not claiming enough, to say that his moral and political character is quite as good, and his perception of right and wrong quite as sharp as that of the noisy journalists and windy orators who have denounced as a "fraud" and a "villain" what he has declared to be "the lawful work of a lawful body." Our Democracy know Judge BLACK; they have confidence in him; and no man need tell them that a measure which meets his approval is tainted with fraud or villainy. They will not abate their high confidence in him at the bidding of men whom they know to be unfit to tie the latches of his shoes.

And HOWELL COMB—the honest, fair-minded, high-toned Georgian statesman, whom the Democracy of Franklin listened to with so much delight in our Court House in the campaign of 1850—is he too a conniver at "villainy" in Kansas? We think our people will be slow to believe that he would sanction a fraud. We are sure they would not believe that he would sanction a fraud. We are sure they would not believe that he would sanction a fraud. We are sure they would not believe that he would sanction a fraud.

The truth is, as we have already stated, the misnamed "Free State" men of Kansas did not and do not now want the Slavery question settled. They want it kept open till the Presidential election in 1860, and to keep it open they would trample under foot all the Constitutions and all the laws in the universe. They have defied the laws from the beginning, and they will defy them to the end. If they can get the Constitution referred back to them, they will kick it about from year to year, and use every exertion to keep the Slavery question open for agitation throughout the North. The only chance for speedy peace lies in the immediate admission of Kansas under the Constitution she has lawfully formed. If that Constitution does not embody the will of the people, the first State Legislature that assemble can call a Convention to amend it, and the Slavery clause, or any other provision that does not meet the sanction of the people, can be stricken out. If desired by the people, a new Constitution, from beginning to end, can be formed in less than three months after the admission of the State. Just as soon as Kansas shall be admitted, so soon will this dangerous agitation cease; and just as long as Kansas is kept out, so long will the Nation's ears be split with "abricks for freedom." All who want speedy peace should go with the administration for the immediate admission of Kansas.—And whatever timid politicians may do, the bone and sinew of the Democratic party of Pennsylvania will go with the administration on this question.

The area of the State of Texas is large enough, if it were settled as thickly as Massachusetts, to hold nearly fifty millions of persons, or about double the present population of the whole United States.

As many days as we pass without doing some good, are so many days without doing any good.
