Love and Physic.

A elever man was Dr. Dig, Misfortunes well he bore, Tie never lost his patience till He had no patients more; And though his practice once was large, It did not swell his gains, The pains he labored for were but The labor for his pains.

Though "art is long," his cash got short, And well might Galen dread it. For who will trust a name unknown. When merit gets po credit 7 To marry seemed the only way To case his mind of trouble. Misfortunes never singly come, And misery makes them double.

He had a patient, rich and fair, That hearts by scores was breaking, And so he once had felt her wrist, He thought her hand of taking; But what the law made strangers do, Did strike his comprehension; Who live in these United States,

Do first declare intention.

And so he called-his beating heart With anxious fears was swelling-And half in habit took her hand. And on her tongue was swelling; But thrice, though he essayed to speak, 'He stopped, and stuck, and blundered, For say, what mortal could be cool, Whose pulse was most a hundred? "Madame," at last he falters out-His love had grown courageous-"I have discerned a new complaint, I hope to prove contagious; And when the symptons I relate, And show its diagnosis. -Ak, let me hope from those dear lips, Some favorable prognosis.

"This done," he cries, "let's tie those ties Which none but death can sever; Since 'like cures like' I do infer That love cures love forever.' He paused-she blushed, however strange It seems on first perusal, Although there was no promise made, She gave-him a refusal. "I cannot marry one whe lives Br other folks' distresses-The man I marry I must love, Nor fear his fond caresses; For who, whatever ba their sex, However strange the case is, Would like to have a doctor's bill Stuck up into their faces?"
