Rural Economy.

"Cattle who by the plough would thrive,
Himself must either hold or drive."

Remedies.

Apoplexy.—Until the services of a physician can be procured, keep the patient in a nearly erect position; be careful not to let the head fall on the chest, back or forward; remove everything from about the throat; rub the chest and spine briskly, with the hand or a cloth dipped in cold water; apply mustard or pepper poultices. A sudden paralytic stroke is hardly distinguished from apoplexy; it does not so often terminate fatally at once, but leaves the patient generally in a worse condition. In the cases treated under our observation, bleeding seemed to operate unfavorably.

Bites or Stings of Venomous Insects.—Bind on a poultice of common salt or soda.

Burns or Scalds.—If the injury is on a part that can be instantly immersed in cold water, it will never blister, but if the patient is chilly or afraid of cold water, put on promptly a thick coat of white, or sift common flour on thickly, bind up and let it remain until healed.

Boils, Risings, or Inflamed Breasts.—Fold a linen cloth several double; dip it in cold water, lay it on the part inflamed. Cover it over with as many folds of dry cloth. If the pain is not very soon relieved, use ice instead of the wet compress, and we warrant instant relief and a cure, if persevered in.

Cholera, Cholera Morbus, &c.—We have had woful familiarity with these diseases, especially Asiatic cholera.—Our conviction is that three-fourths who die perish from disregard of premonitory symptoms. In many cases, to lie still, keep warm and take any astringent medicine, will ward off an attack. From 5 to 20 drops of laudanum, in a teaspoon of camphor, has answered our purpose generally. If the attack is severe, as soon as pain in the bowels is felt, a vomiting begins, give a powder of calomel, 2 drachms; red pepper, 2 drachms; gum camphor, 1 drachm. After spell of vomiting, or rice water discharge, give a half powder. When the pain, vomiting, &c., have been relieved, give and repeat the dose every four, six or eight hours, until it operates satisfactorily, a powder composed of aloes, 1 drachm, rhubarb, 1 drachm, gum camphor, 1½ drachms. The patient should be kept comfortably warm, and if any symptoms of cramp appear, rubbed incessantly with flour of sulphur, whiskey, &c.

Drowning.—Carry the body gently with the head a little raised. Strip quickly, rub the body dry and place in warm blankets. Press the tongue downward and forward, insert a tube into the windpipe, and blow into the lungs and press on the abdomen alternately, thus producing an artificial respiration. Means of restoration should be persevered in many hours, as recovery is always slow.

Fainting.—Lay the person in a recumbent posture, head elevated, where there is a free circulation of air, loosen the clothes, sprinkle cold water in the face, and apply strong odors to the nostrils.

Bite of Mad Dogs, Venomous Serpents, Poisonous Insects, &c.—We were assured in Mississippi that a mad dog or rattlesnake bite could be rendered harmless, by making the person drunk immediately. We have seen the same remedy published in Southern papers. The usual method prescribed is to tie a band tightly between the wound and heart; cup the wound, then cut or burn out thoroughly with red hot iron or lunar caustic.

Poisons.—These are too numerous to go into detail. Emetics are usually given after such as cause drowsiness or delirium. Sweet water, milk, whites of eggs, or oil, after those that occasion pain in the stomach and vomiting.

Toothache.—If from a deranged stomach, take an emetic. If the tooth is hollow put cotton saturated with creosote—if badly diseased have it extracted promptly.

Earache.—Mix spirits of camphor, sweet oil and laudanum together, warm, and pour into the ear a half teaspoonful, fill the ear with wool or cotton, warm a little bag of bran, and lie down with your ear on it.

Hog Yards.

Keep your hog-yards constantly and liberally replenished with materials for manure—muck, chip-manure, saw-dust, spent tan, straw, refuse hay, rubbish from the fields, and spurious vegetation from the garden and wood-lot, rushes, peat, clay, rags, cobs, rotten wood, and, indeed, every substance that when rotted or reduced to its primary elements or principles, is capable of supplying pabulum or pasture to plants. When the mass is sufficiently broken down in physical texture, cleanse out the yards and commence accumulating more. In this way a large quantity of most excellent compost may be made, and many articles ordinarily overlooked in our imperfect economy, and contemplated as worthless, converted to an important and valuable use.

Good Roads.

A writer in the Tribune explains the philosophy of having good roads at all times, in all parts of the country. It is exceedingly simple and entirely practicable. It consists in keeping the water off the road on both sides, and into or under the roads. Where the track is very level, cross ditches should be made at proper distances, to convey all the water away from the side ditches. In this manner with a trifling additional expense, a good road can be secured forever, and a vast amount of expense in constant repairs, and in the wear and tear of horses, cattle, and carriages, be saved.

To the Farmers.

Important Discovery.

CONSUMPTION and all Diseases of the Lungs and Throat are positively Cured by Inhalation, which conveys the remedies to the cavities in the lungs through the air passages, and coming in direct contact with the disease, neutralizes the tubercular matter, allays the cough, causes a free and easy expectoration, heals the lungs, purifies the blood, imparts renewed vitality to the nervous system, giving that tone and energy so indispensable for the restoration of health. To be able to state confidently that Consumption is curable by inhalation, is to me a source of unalloyed pleasure. It is as much under the control of medical treatment as any other formidable disease: ninety out of every hundred cases can be cured in the first stages, and fifty per cent. in the second; but in the third stage it is impossible to save more than five per cent, for the Lungs are so cut up by the disease as to bid defiance to medical skill.—Even, however, in the last stages, Inhalation affords extraordinary relief to the suffering attending this fearful scourge, which annually destroys ninety-five thousand persons in the United States alone: and a correct calculation shows that of the present population of the earth, eighty millions are destined to fill the Consumptive's grave.

Truly the quiver of death has no arrow so fatal as Consumption. In all ages it has been the great enemy of life, for it spares neither age nor sex, but sweeps off alike the brave, the beautiful, the graceful and the gifted. By the help of that Supreme Being from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, I am enabled to offer to the afflicted a permanent and speedy cure in Consumption. The first cause of tubercles is from impure blood, and the immediate effect produced by their deposition in the lungs is to prevent the free admission of air into the air cells, which causes a weakened vitality through the entire system. Then surely it is more rational to expect greater good from medicines entering the cavities of the lungs than from those administered through the stomach; the patient will always find the lungs free and the breathing easy, after Inhaling remedies. Thus, Inhalation is a local remedy, nevertheless it acts constitutionally, and with more power and certainty than remedies administered by the stomach. To prove the powerful and direct influence of this mode of administration, chloroform inhaled will entirely destroy sensibility in a few minutes, paralyzing the entire nervous system, so that a limb may be amputated without the slightest pain; inhaling the ordinary burning gas will destroy life in a few hours.

The inhalation of ammonia will rouse the system when fainting or apparently dead.—The odor of many of the medicines is perceptible in the skin a few minutes after being inhaled, and may be immediately detected in the blood. A convincing proof of the constitutional effects of inhalation, is the fact that sickness is always produced by breathing foul air—is not this positive evidence that proper remedies, carefully prepared and judiciously administered through the lungs should produce the happiest results? During eighteen years' practice, many thousands suffering from diseases of the lungs and throat, have been under my care, and I have effected many remarkable cures, even after the sufferers had been pronounced in the last stages, which fully satisfies me that consumption is no longer a fatal disease. My treatment of consumption is original, and founded on long experience and a thorough investigation. My perfect acquaintance with the nature of tubercles, &c., enables me to distinguish readily, the various forms of disease that simulate consumption, and apply the proper remedies, rarely being mistaken even in a single case. This familiarity, in connection with certain pathological and microscopic discoveries, enables me to relieve the lungs from the effects of contracted chests, to enlarge the chest, purify the blood, impart to it renewed vitality, giving energy and tone to the entire system.

Medicines with full directions sent to any part of the United States and Canadas by patients communicating their symptoms by letter. But the cure would be more certain if the patient should pay me a visit, which would give me an opportunity to examine the lungs and enable me to prescribe with much greater certainty, and then the cure could be effected without my seeing the patient again.
