Early Planting.

I send you an article on planting corn, as the result of experiments by a friend of mine, which is at your service.

For at least four years this experiment was going on, for the purpose of ascertaining the best mode of growing corn, and one great error into which many farmers fall, is that of planting too close; from three feet to three feet and a half is generally the distance allowed between the rows each way.

The plan of my farmer friend is to score out his rows from North to South, leaving a space of full four feet between each. He then drops two grains at one place, with an interval of two feet and a half between each dropping. The object in scoring out North and South, is to give every hill or stalk the benefit of as much sun as possible, and to prevent in a certain degree one row from shading another.

Corn, like snakes, is fond of the sun. Every hill is covered with the hoe, (preferring the good way in that respect to any other) taking good care that no stones or clods rest upon the place where the corn has been planted. This can be accomplished in no way so well as with the hoe.

His time for planting is generally between the 10th and 15th of May, giving the ground a chance to become well warmed before the seed is put into it. There is far less danger of the corn rotting when the ground is warm, and the rapidity of its growth more than compensates for the lateness of the season; besides, it is not near so liable to a back-set as when it is planted earlier.

When farmers plant, as I know, their corn the last week in April, when the ground is wet and cold, and as a consequence (unless under very favorable circumstances) it lays there for weeks without germinating, and very frequently rots. I have known corn to remain in the ground for three weeks before it made its appearance above ground, while it is seldom that corn planted from the 10th to the 15th of May does not sprout in three or four days. It may be proper to remark here, that I always soak my seed corn (as does my friend) in hen manure water, before planting.

I prefer this mode of planting to the drilling system, as the corn is less difficult to keep clean, and I find you that I can raise just as much as by the other plan. I know of some that have raised from 75 to 80 bushels per acre without extra manuring, which I consider a fair yield.

Last season my friend tried an experiment upon ten acres, by planting one half full 4 feet apart, two grains at a place 2 1/2 feet apart. The other half was drilled in, 4 feet apart. The drilled portion was much more difficult to keep clean than the other, and the yield was about the same. The corn on the 5 acres planted according to my favorite method, that is full four feet between the rows, and two and a half between the droppings, was much the finest, being larger and fuller in the ear, and easier husked.

It should have been mentioned in the beginning of this article, that ground intended for corn, is always put in the very best condition before planting. Spring plowing is, I think, the best, or much preferred by me for corn; unless the land is too rich, which is not often the case. In concluding this plain statement, I will merely remark, that if the same attention were paid to corn growing, that is given to the raising of wheat—if the land was as well manured and worked, we could as easily raise one hundred bushels to the acre, as we now raise fifty.

How to Stop Blood.

Take the fine dust of tanned leather, and bind it close upon the wound, and the blood will soon cease to flow. These articles are at all times accessible and easy to be obtained. After the blood has ceased to flow, iodoform may be advantageously applied to the wound. Due regard to these instructions will save a patient of mind, and running for the surgeon, who would probably make no better prescription, if present.

How to Cool Water.

If it is desired to cool water for drinking in warm weather, and ice cannot be obtained for this purpose, let it be kept in an unglazed earthenware pitcher wrapped around with two or three folds of coarse cotton cloth kept constantly wet. The theory of cooling water in this manner is the evaporation of heat from it, by the evaporation of the moisture in the cotton cloth—compression produces cold, compression heat.

Economy of Carpets.

To preserve expensive carpets, it is well to completely cover the floor beneath them with druggist, or coarse matting, which is a much better plan than to spread a layer of straw between the floor and carpet; the straw (besides the difficulty of spreading it perfectly smooth and even) accumulating much dirt that works up through the carpet.

New Firm.

GROCERIES AND DRY GOODS.—J. C. GUINN & BROS. have taken the store of John Hoke, on the North West corner of the Diamond, where they will continue the Dry Goods and Grocery business on an enlarged scale. They will constantly keep on hand a large and varied assortment of everything in their line. They have just laid in a large and splendid stock of Spring and Summer Goods, and are now opening them for the inspection of the public. We cordially invite the citizens of Gettysburg and vicinity to give us a call, and examine for themselves, as we feel satisfied they will want no other account of them than they give. We are determined to keep nothing but good Goods and to sell cheaper than the cheapest for the cash. Give us a call, no trouble to show goods. J. C. GUINN & BROS. April 5, 1858.

A Card.

HAVING disposed of my store to the Messrs. Guinn, I would recommend the new firm to the confidence of the public, and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. JOHN HOKK. April 5, 1858.

Dissolution of Partnership.

THE Co-partnership existing between the undersigned has been dissolved by mutual consent. We are much obliged to our friends and the public for the liberal support extended to us. Our books are placed in the hands of Dunlap Paxton for collection and we earnestly request those indebted to us to call and make immediate payment, as we desire to settle the business of the firm without delay. ALEX. COBBAN. DUNLAP PAXTON. March 17, 1858.

A Card.

THE subscriber having disposed of his interest in the Store of COBBAN & PATTON to R. F. McCLINTY, respectfully asks the continuance of his friends and customers to patronize the new firm of PATTON & McCLINTY. A. COBBAN. March 22, 1858.
