> Carrying out the Principles of our Party."

The Detroit Free Press tells the following of the present Governor of Michigan, and Judson, whose daughter ran off with a lame negro. She was simply carrying out the minciples of the Republican party, as she learned them in the house of her father. The negro must have felt "perfectly at home" there, where he could at the table, sop his bread in the meat platter, and elsewhere take his dessert from the lips of the daughter : "It is not our intention to write the biography of the amiable Judson, whose daughter ran away with the lame nigger, but some of the numerous little incidents that come to our knowledge are too good to keep, and we could not refrain from telling them, oven if their peculiar sest were not materially in-creased by the connection above referred to. One of the best of these, illustrating the unadulterated penchant for Ethiopians, is the following: When Governor Wisner was in the midst of the campaign which resulted in his election two months since, he had occasion the visit the premises of the aniable Jud-son. Dinner hour arrived previous to his departure, and he was invited by the host to stay and take "pot luck' with them, which, after the manner of politicians, he blandly consented to do. "He was slightly taken aback when, upon preparing to perform his customary ablutions, he was shown a dish for that purpose which he had just seen a big darkey use, but being a candidate he swallowed his repugnance, and soaped and scrubbed away manfally un-til he was satisfied, when he walked in to dinper. Seating himself, he was accosted by his bost with, 'Don't know as you're used to this kind of thing, but I make it a rule to carry out the principles of the party, and let 'em feel perfectly at home.' The Governor stared a little at this, and looked for the solution, which was made manifest presently in the bim, pegging into fat pork and boiled pata-toes in a perfectly independent, and free-and-easy manuer. 'Yes, massa,' said one of them as he reached over and sopped a piece of bread in the meat platter, rolling up the whites of his eyes at the Hon. Moses, ' wa's good as white folks here.
