Singular Circumstance.

During the time of the cessation of arms in the year 1777, while the articles of capitulation were preparing at Saratoga, the soldiers of the British and American armies often discoursed with each other from the opposite banks of Hudson's river (which at Saratoga as about thirty yards wide, and not very deep.)

A soldier in a British regiment named Maguire, came down to the bank of the river with a number of his companious, who engaged in conversation with a party of Americans on the opposite shore. In a short time some-thing was observed very forcibly to strike the mind of Maguire. He suddenly darted from his companions, and plunged into the stream. At the very same moment, one of the American soldiers, seized by a similar impulse, reloud cries of "my dear brother! my dear brother!" which accompanied the transactonished spectators. They were brothers— the first had emigrated from Ireland, and the British, and the other in the American service, totally ignorant until that hour, that they were engaged in hostile combat against each other's life.

He at once humored their design, by affecting silliness, and making the most absurd and senseless remarks. Upon arriving at the place where he was to stop, they ascertained who their butt was, and began to apologize, observing, in extenuation of their rudeness, that his own conversa-tion had misled them. "Oh!" said he. that's my way; I always try to accommodate myself to the company I am in, and when I am among fools, I talk foolish!"

A Short Sermon and a Good One.—The Rev. Dr. B- is noted for brief sententious sayings in the pulpit and out of it. As he was coming down Chestnut street the other day, a gentleman asked him, "Sir, can you tell me how to find the Sheriff's office?" ductor walked on, leaving his questioner gap-ing upon the side-walk. Ho was a stranger who had come to town on business, and asked for information; but the more he pondered on the reply the more he was convinced that his unknown informant had answered him

Constitution. Eighth Census.—We are laformed that the statements which have appeared in series paints respecting the early appointance or assistants to take the Census in a misconception of the true state of a him in connexion with that work. It is not manufactured, as we learn from good nathority, that the instructions to the marshale will be issued before February; and it is not expectation. ed that these officers will anticipate the directions of the Secretary of the Interior by the appointment of their subordinates is advance. As the census will not be commenced before the first day of June next, there is no neterior ty for the appointment of the assistants of the marshals much in advance of that period.
