In the mirth of the mighty Sea. But the Wind is sad and sestless, And cursed with an inward pain: You muy hark as you will, by valley or hill, But you hear him still complain. He wails on the barren mountains, And shricks on the wintry sea; He sobs in the cedar, and moans in the pine,

And shudders all over the sepen tree, And I know not which is best.—
The laughter that slips from the Ocean's tips,
Or the comfortless Wind's unrest. There's a pang in all rejoicing, A joy in the heart of pain, the Wind that saddens, the Sea that gladdess. Are singing the self-same strain,

"Did you ever hear a soul?" "No.

"Did you ever taste a soul?" "No.

"Did you ever smell a soul?" " No.

"Did you ever feel a soul?" "Yes, thank God," said the preacher. "Well," said the caviling doctor, "there are four out of the five senses against one that there is no soul?"

So the matter might have dropped, but the preacher, as subtile in understanding as he was pious in heart, turned the table upon the caviling doc-

"No." "Did you ever hear a pain?"

"Did you ever smell a pain?"

" No. "Did you ever feel a pain?"

"Yes," said the doctor.
"Well, then," rejoined the preacher, there are, you see, also four senses against one to prove that there is no such thing as pain; and yet, sir, you protext, forgot to return.

Chinese Delicacies-How Rate, Puppie Colortial Epicures The Hong Kong correspondent of the

Newark Mercary writes:

You have often heard, no doubt, of the high regard in which rate and puppies are held by the Chinese, and you may have read something as to the magnitude of the trade which has grown out of the promiting appetite for those inxuries; but very few of your readers, perhaps, have had ocular demonstration, as I have had, of the wide extent of the prevailing rat and dog consuming custom. Being recently in Canton, after exploring other points of interest. paid a visit to Rat street, which derives its name from the many restaurants in which nothing but rats are served up, and the many shops where rats only are sold. They were expessed for sale in every style—alive, dried, smok. ed, etc., and the shop keepers informed in our rounds, we found in a front room several tables surrounded by Chinese the hideons embraces of the reptile! river.
