An Appeal for Onions.—A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Gen. McClellan's camp, Harriston's Landing, says: I have seen ten cents paid for a single onion, and but last night a soldier offered was the rear guard, the rebels following to the guard of some commissary stores near within one mile of camp, when they commenced where I am quartered $1 for a small loaf to shell the camp, but Gen. Shields's came up of soft bread. And yet those men had on the right of them and captured all their pieces and 600 prisoners.
