

THE GRAVE OF CRITTENDEN.

After describing the obsequies of the late John J. Crittenden, a letter says: "At the close of the exercises the pall was lifted and disclosed a plain metallic coffin, without ornament, other than the customary breast-plate bearing the simple inscription of name and date of birth and death." The hand of affection had scattered a few sweetly-scented white flowers on the last receptacle. The procession moved to the solemn strains of the band at 12 o'clock, and over Arsenal Hill, reached the beautiful spot overlooking the Kentucky river, where a spot excites the admiration of every stranger, and it is justly the pride not only of the citizens of Frankfort, but of the whole State; for, aside from its esthetic worth, it contains the mouldering remains of nearly all the pioneers who rescued what is now the State from the hands of the hostile red men, as well as those of military chieftains and statesmen, whose names illumine the history of the Commonwealth.

The solemn cortège passed through the gravel-skirted streets of the "city of the dead" until it reached a beautiful square monument, with a shrouded urn, erected by Mr. Crittenden to the memory of his deceased wife. Here it paused; and the coffin was borne from the hearse to its last resting place.

A humor of the Gods.—During the draft in the fourteenth ward a little incident gave rise to much merriment and contributed to the good feeling everywhere manifested about the conscription. In the crowd there stood a pale-faced freshman, with his hands crossed and his arms behind his back. He gazed intently at each man as he was drawn from the wheel of destiny. He had not been heard to speak a word to anybody. Presently he appeared to be operated upon by some unseen galvanic battery. During his spasms he exclaimed in a shrill tone: "Will you tell me where I stand!—rouse it, will you!—the man! He was evidently full of dread and suspense."

"What's the matter with you?" shouted the Provost Marshal.

"Oh, for jebus, turn it round a dozen of times, for that man you drawed last is my next door neighbor."

At this point the universal laugh came in.—Philadelphia North American.

New County.—On the 21st ult., an election was held in Luzerne county, to decide by vote whether the county should be divided and establish that upper part, including Scranton, into a separate county. The measure was defeated.

Special Notices.

Singer & Co.'s Letter A Family Sewing-Machine, with all the new improvements (Hemmer, Braider, Binder, Feller, Tucker, Corder, Gatherer, etc., &c.), is the cheapest, best, and most beautiful of all machines for Family sewing and light manufacturing purposes. It makes the interlocked stitch (which is alike on both sides), and has great facility for sewing all kinds of cloth, and with no kind of thread. Every feature, as well as the finest machine, may be seen to perfection in this machine. It will sew 2000 purl cotton as well as No. 30 linen thread. What it can do can only be known by seeing the machine tested. The Folding-top Case is among the most valuable of the new improvements. It may be opened out as a spacious and substantial case to sustain the work, and when the machine is not in use it may be folded into a box which protects the working parts of the machine. There is no other machine to equal the Letter A in simplicity, durability, facility and certainty of rapid action at all rates of speed. The Family Sewing Machine is fast becoming as popular for family use as SINGER & Co.'s Manufacturing Machines are for manufacturing purposes.

Woolly Yesterdays.—Horatio Seymour, now Governor of New York, and George W. Woodward, the next Governor of Pennsylvania, graduated in the same class at Geneva, N. Y., and between them there has ever existed the truest, firmest friend-ship. Let the people do their duty, as we have no doubt they will, and we will after all have what New York now has, a Governor worthy of the great State over which he presides.

A Great Show in Bucks County.—On Thursday last one of the most brilliant assemblies ever held in Bucks county, Pa., has been organized for the benefit of the poor in Jackson. The meeting was opened with a short service, followed by a short address by Dr. Folger, to be presented to Jackson's native State. (Virginia) to be placed in the capitol or state house at Richmond.

The Great English Remedy.

—Saint James' Clark's CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.—The most remarkable is contained in the case of all those named, and the price does not exceed the female constitution.

It mode all cases, removes all difficulties, from a waster's curse, and brings on the monthly period with regularity.

These Pills should not be taken by females that are pregnant during the first three months, as they are sure to bring on miscarriage; but at every other time and in every other case they are safe.

In all cases of nervous and suppurative diseases, pain in the back and limbs, rheumatism, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, the whites, and all the pointed diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure, when all other means have failed.

Ful directions in pamphlet around each package, which should be carefully preserved. They can be had in a bottle, containing 50 pills, price 25¢ for $1 and 6 three-cent stamps to any agent.

THE COMPILER FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

The approaching gubernatorial campaign will be one of the most important, and therefore one of the most interesting, ever witnessed in the old Keystone. Feeling that no effort should be spared by the Democratic party to give the people all the light possible, shall labor unceasingly to that end—never forgetting the happy and prosperous condition of our country under Democratic rule, and the sad picture it presents under the guidance of fanatical and destructive Abolitionists. In striving for the success of Democratic principles and men, we shall be doing that which we conscientiously believe to be for the good of the country. Thus impressed, and desiring to increase to the largest extent the number of readers of the Compiler, we have concluded to furnish it for the campaign—from this time until after the Octo-ber election—at the low price of FIFTY CENTS, in advance.

We trust that every Democrat in the county, for the sake of the glorious old cause in which we are mutually engaged, will each interest himself in this matter, and send us at least one subscriber.

GENERAL McCLELLAN AND THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG.

[From the Boston Courier.]

It has been wholly remarked that "the ghost of McClellan" fought the battle of Gettysburg." To this point we add a fragment from the letter of an officer of distinction who has been in the Army of the Potomac from the beginning of its organization. The first statement to the same effect we had through a Massachusetts officer of rank a few days after the battle. We do not say how such an announcement, which took its way undisturbed through the army, could have had its origin; but it would seem as if those who have shown themselves so unjust as to deprive the country of the incomparable services of McClellan were naturally mean enough to take advantage of the known devotion of the army to him, to inspire with courage and confidence all events in the course of his presence. At all events the rumor was attempted and was successful.

"I am still of the opinion that if McClellan had been left in command of the army, we should have been in Richmond. Had this army been sent down to a point on the James river, and a junction made with the forces from Fortress Monroe, with a co-operating column from Manassas and Hanover Court House, we was McClellan's original plan, there would not have been a repulse at Fredericksburg or Chancellorsville. Lee would not have been able to cross the Rappahannock, and enter Maryland and Pennsylvania; there would not have been any battle at Gettysburg. But the administration were not willing to fall back on his plan; he certainly had the right road, and the one he chose was drawn from the wheel of destiny. He had not been heard to speak a word to anybody. Presently he appeared to be operated upon by some unseen galvanic battery. During his spasms he exclaimed in a shrill tone: "Will you tell me where I stand!—rouse it, will you!—the man! He was evidently full of dread and suspense."

"What's the matter with you?" shouted the Provost Marshal.

"Oh, for jebus, turn it round a dozen of times, for that man you drawed last is my next door neighbor."
