FREE, BLACKS IN 1855. The New York Tribune, Sept. 22, 1855, held the following opinion of free black-: "Five tenths of the free blacks have no ides of setting themselves to work except as the hirelings or servitors of white men nb ides of building a church or other serious enterprises except beggary of the whites.

'As a class, the blacks are indolent, improvident, servile, and licentious, and Gerritt Smith, in a letter to Governor Hunt, complained that 'the most of them preferred' o rot both physically and morally in cities, ner

That the people justly view with alarm the reckless extravagance which pervades every department of the federal government: that a return to rigid economy and accountability is indispensable to arrest the systematic plunder of the tressury by favored partisans; while the recent startling nents of frauds and corruptions at the federal metropolis show that an entire change of administration is deman-

[From the N.Y. Albion-English Organ.] No matter in what direction a raid takes place, arson and plunder are now considerd to be legitimate orders of the day. Burning up plantations and farms, demol-sishing grist mills, and turning helpless in-habitants out to starve—which ought to bring the perpetrators of such deeds to court martials—are triumphantly quoted as proofs of enterprise and valor.

It is strange, too, that this strocious and impolitic system is approved by a people who have not shown themselves, so far, addicted to wanton cruelty. We have, however, no hesitation in stamping it as disbring ill will upon the cause of the North, upon the North's most abiding friends. *

It will be held, and rightly, that the destruction of railroads, and of public stores and provisions, is an entirely different matand provisions, is an entirely different matter from the indiscriminate application of the torob. Does not the fiendish glee with which these devastating processes are described, fully bear out the oft-made assertion, that war is not and never can be a moral purifier? There is something humiliating in the avowal that, with hundreds of thou sands of brave men in arms, a nation should he called upon to admire flouring-mills laid Will be sold on very accommodating the seeds of eternal hatred are thus deliber ately sown, the narrators of these exploits contradict all their previous assertions that the South was universally starving.
