* * * Now the effect is to carry universal black suffrage with emancipation, and to make the adoption of that an absolute test of Anti-Slavery principle.

We have seen this purpose displayed in the protracted controversy between the Senate and House on the bill organizing the Territory of Montana. Though no negroes ever have settled, or ever will settle, in that region, yet the crusaders forced an issue whether, supposing they were there, they should be allowed to vote. Upon that empty abstraction they wasted days of the most important period of this session. Now

Again it is a question for the States and not for Congress to settle. The Constitution ty, and will be happy to fill orders for it. He gives Congress no power to prescribe the qualification of voters in the States. Those qualifications are invariably established by the State Constitutions. Every State has some set up at his Warehouse, in Gettystand the State Constitutions. Every State has SAMUEL HERBST. unrestricted power in that respect. It aland, it is likely, always will be. Massachusetts now permits all its black men to white; New York permits a certain portion; Pennsylvania permits none. Congress has no power whatever to prevent these differ enced It may talk upon the matter as it talks upon everything else, but no practical result can follow. It will be better too Congress at all times, to confine itself to its own constitutional business, and leave this subject where only it belongs. If Congress cannot so restrain itself, it at least should let the subject alone until after the war.

Unquestionably the Times is right. Congress has no power over the question, unless the Constitution is thrown out of the way, States alone have power over the question Hats, Hats, or of suffrage, and no set records. of suffrage, and no act passed by Congress can bind them unless they choose to dispense with all their constitutional rights; which we trust they are not quite prepared Shoes for Cl

"Loyalty, we need not say, is a virtue and disloyalty a crime, under a republic no less than under a monarchy. Under an absolute monarch, loyalty is obedience and devotion to the person of the monarch, who is the state, the government and the law. To oppose him in his will, or to refuse to support him against his enemies, foreign or domestic, is disloyalty, and punishable as such. In a republican state like ours, the political people of the nation is the sovereign, and loyalty is obedience and deit against its foreign or domestic enemies, when called upon through its constituted organs, is disloyalty, morally treason.
