

A DEMOCRATIC AND FAMILY JOURNAL.

GETTYSBURG, PA., MONDAY, AUG. 22, 1864.

TWO DOLLARS A-YEAR. No. 47.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

J. C. Neely, Attorney at Law. Particular attention paid to collection of Penalties, Bonds, and Bail. Office in the S. E. corner of the Diamond.

Wm. A. Ducon, Attorney at Law. Office in the North-west corner of Centre Square, Gettysburg, Pa.

D. McConaughy, Attorney at Law. Office on door west of Butler's drug and book store.

A. J. Cover, Attorney at Law. Will promptly attend to Collections and all other business connected with the law.

Edward B. Buehler, Attorney at Law. Will faithfully and promptly attend to all business entrusted to him.

J. Lawrence Hill, M. D. Has his office on the corner of the Diamond and the street.

Drs. Cress & Becker, Polychromatic and Homoeopathic Physicians. Office at the corner of the Diamond and the street.

Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal's, Office and Dispensary. Corner of the Diamond and the street.

Dr. A. Holtz, Graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. Office at the corner of the Diamond and the street.

Dr. Wm. Taylor, Informs the inhabitants of Gettysburg and vicinity that he will continue the practice of his profession.

Adams County Mercantile Transportation Company. Incorporated March 18, 1861.

The Great Discovery. O'FERRILL'S... A Rheumatic can be cured by using H. L. MILLER'S CELEBRATED RHEUMATIC MIXTURE.

The Groceries Store. ON THE HILL... The undersigned would respectfully inform the citizens of Gettysburg and vicinity.

WALL PAPER! WALL PAPER! All new styles, just received from Dr. R. HORNBERG'S Drug and Variety Store.

EXCELSION!! EXCELSION!! The Excelsior Washing Machine is the best in the World.

FOR LADIES! All sizes of Buffalo Overalls for sale at the corner of York street and the Diamond.

CHEAPEST WHIPS AND LASHES, good and cheap, for sale by ROW & WOODS.

ALL the best Patent Medicines can be had at the new Family Drug and Prescription Store.

POETRY.

For the Compiler. 'MORAL POWER.' When ex-President Pierce, in his speech at the Democratic Convention, July 4, 1853, in Concord, New Hampshire, declared that in his hope for extinction from our present difficulties rested upon 'moral power' and not upon 'the aggressive instrumentalities of military power,' the Republican papers and orators came down upon him in a terrible whirlwind of invective and ridicule.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

POETRY.

For the Compiler. 'MORAL POWER.' When ex-President Pierce, in his speech at the Democratic Convention, July 4, 1853, in Concord, New Hampshire, declared that in his hope for extinction from our present difficulties rested upon 'moral power' and not upon 'the aggressive instrumentalities of military power,' the Republican papers and orators came down upon him in a terrible whirlwind of invective and ridicule.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

POETRY.

For the Compiler. 'MORAL POWER.' When ex-President Pierce, in his speech at the Democratic Convention, July 4, 1853, in Concord, New Hampshire, declared that in his hope for extinction from our present difficulties rested upon 'moral power' and not upon 'the aggressive instrumentalities of military power,' the Republican papers and orators came down upon him in a terrible whirlwind of invective and ridicule.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

POETRY.

For the Compiler. 'MORAL POWER.' When ex-President Pierce, in his speech at the Democratic Convention, July 4, 1853, in Concord, New Hampshire, declared that in his hope for extinction from our present difficulties rested upon 'moral power' and not upon 'the aggressive instrumentalities of military power,' the Republican papers and orators came down upon him in a terrible whirlwind of invective and ridicule.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

POETRY.

For the Compiler. 'MORAL POWER.' When ex-President Pierce, in his speech at the Democratic Convention, July 4, 1853, in Concord, New Hampshire, declared that in his hope for extinction from our present difficulties rested upon 'moral power' and not upon 'the aggressive instrumentalities of military power,' the Republican papers and orators came down upon him in a terrible whirlwind of invective and ridicule.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

How few the stars shine down this people's head With fruitful labor and with honest sweat. Spite Sabbath bells, that called the land to prayer, Spite the sweet strains of the Summer air, And all our tenders, or, from year to year, No harp music lingers upon the air.

try, to be kept up to the full number of 40,000 men, to be organized, drilled, and equipped by the State, who shall be sworn and mustered into the service of the State for three years, who shall assemble for drill at such times and places as he may direct; who shall be clothed, armed and equipped by the State, and paid when assembled for drill or called into service, and who shall at all times be liable to be called into immediate service for the defense of the State, independently of the remainder of the militia.

As this force would be subject to sudden call, the larger part of it should be organized in the counties lying on our extreme border; and as the people of those counties are more personally interested in their protection, the recommendation is made to authorize the Governor to designate the parts of the State in which it should be raised and to save the time and expense of transporting troops from remote parts of the State and the subsistence and in going to and from the border.

A body of men so organized will, it is believed, be effective to prevent raids and incursions. The expenses of clothing, arming and equipping such a force cannot be correctly estimated, but it is believed that the Governor has been directed to make approximate estimates for your information, which will be independent of pay and subsistence.

The State should provide at least six four gun batteries of field artillery, with all the modern improvements.

The new State Constitution of Louisiana, which will be submitted to those citizens who the military authorities will allow to vote, has for its first chapter these two articles: Article 1. Slavery an involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been convicted, and hereby forever abolished and prohibited throughout the State.

The Constitution constitutes as voters every white male, 21 years of age, resident of the State for twelve months, and of the voting period three months; but adds this significant and flexible provision: 5. The Legislature shall have power to pass laws extending the right of suffrage to persons, citizens of the United States, by military service, by taxation to support the Government, or by intellectual attainments, may be deemed entitled thereto.

The salary of the Governor is fixed at $8,000, and of the Lieutenant Governor and the members of the State Senate at $5,000, and of the members of the Legislature $3 a day, but the sessions of the Legislature are inflexibly limited to sixty days—all legislation thereafter is null and void. The Constitution provides for a police force for New Orleans, to be appointed by the Mayor but removable only by a Board of Police Commissioners, of which the Mayor is one. The minimum pay of this police is also established in the Constitution, ranging from $90 to $100 a month.

The Legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; said houses in all cases shall be on the first floor and the Federal forces are withdrawn from the State. The minimum pay of laborers for the State, or county, or city, (in public works) is also established, as follows: Foreman and cartman, $3 50 a day; mechanics, $3; common laboring hands, $2; and the number of men to be employed for a day's work by the State or county, or city, shall not exceed 100.

The Legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; said houses in all cases shall be on the first floor and the Federal forces are withdrawn from the State. The minimum pay of laborers for the State, or county, or city, (in public works) is also established, as follows: Foreman and cartman, $3 50 a day; mechanics, $3; common laboring hands, $2; and the number of men to be employed for a day's work by the State or county, or city, shall not exceed 100.

The Legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; said houses in all cases shall be on the first floor and the Federal forces are withdrawn from the State. The minimum pay of laborers for the State, or county, or city, (in public works) is also established, as follows: Foreman and cartman, $3 50 a day; mechanics, $3; common laboring hands, $2; and the number of men to be employed for a day's work by the State or county, or city, shall not exceed 100.

The Legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; said houses in all cases shall be on the first floor and the Federal forces are withdrawn from the State. The minimum pay of laborers for the State, or county, or city, (in public works) is also established, as follows: Foreman and cartman, $3 50 a day; mechanics, $3; common laboring hands, $2; and the number of men to be employed for a day's work by the State or county, or city, shall not exceed 100.

The Legislature shall have the power to license the selling of lottery tickets and the keeping of gambling houses; said houses in all cases shall be on the first floor and the Federal forces are withdrawn from the State. The minimum pay of laborers for the State, or county, or city, (in public works) is also established, as follows: Foreman and cartman, $3 50 a day; mechanics, $3; common laboring hands, $2; and the number of men to be employed for a day's work by the State or county, or city, shall not exceed 100.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.

Advertisements inserted at the usual rates. See Printing done with neatness and dispatch.