POETRY.

THE WINDS.

We come! we come! and ye feel our might,
As we're hastening on in our boundless flight;
And over the mountains and over the deep,
Our broad, invisible pinions sweep
Like the spirit of liberty, wild and free!
And ye look on our works, and own 'tis we;
Ye call us the winds, but can ye tell
Whither we go, or where we dwell?

Ye mark as we vary our force of power,
And fill the forest or fan the flower,
When the hairbell moves and the rush is bent,
When the spirit is o'erthrown and the sale is rent,
As we waft the bark o'er the slumbering wave,
Or hurry its crew to a watery grave.
And ye say it is we! but can ye trace
The wandering winds to their secret place?

And whether our breath be low or high,
Or come in a soft and balmy sigh;
Our threatenings fill the soul with fear
As our gentle whisperings woo the ear
With music aerial, still 'tis we.
And ye list and ye look; but what do ye see?
Can ye hush one sound of our voice to peace,
Or waken one sound when our slumbers cease?

Our dwelling is in the Almighty's hand,
We come and go at His command;
Whatever sorrow may mark our track,
His word is our guide and we look not back.
And when in our wrath we would turn us away,
Or tune our gentlest air to play,
We will open our heart to Him who binds
Or frees as he will the obedient winds.

MISCELLANY.

MOUNT ARARAT.

Mount Ararat is 6000 feet higher than Etna, and 1528 higher than Mount Blanc, the latter the point of greatest elevation in Europe. It is detached from the other mountains of Asia, and is divided into two conical peaks. Sir Robert Porter paints in vivid colors the magnificence of the spectacle when he first come in sight of Ararat, majestically rising from a widely extended green plain, fertilized by the clear waters of the Aras (the ancient Araxes,) and covered with Armenian villages. In various points of view, the summit has a striking resemblance to a ship—a fact which has been recorded by all travellers to the spot, and the whole country round is full of traditionary stories relative to Noah's ark and the flood.

It is a common belief among the Armenians and Persians, that remains of the ark still exist on the summit. Several attempts have been made to reach the top of the mountain, but rarely have such attempts succeeded. Moving sands which threaten to overwhelm the traveller, flinty roads which cut his shoes to shreds, terrible precipices, with overhanging rocks, and, above all, nests of snakes, have constantly struck terror into the stoutest hearts and nearly in all cases induced the abandonment of the enterprise. At Ervin, the Armenians show the spot where Noah first planted the vine, and the town of Nakhdjovan (place of descent) is believed to mark the spot where the patriarch first settled on quitting the ark.

SOLITUDE.

More and greater sins are committed when men are alone than when they keep themselves in fellowship. When Eve in Paradise walked alone, then came the evil one and deceived her. Whoever is amongst men and in honest company, is ashamed to sin, or, at least, he has no place or opportunity to do so. When David was alone and idle, and went not to the wars, he fell into adultery and murder; and I have myself found that I have never fallen into more sin than when I was alone. Solitariness inviteth to melancholy, and a person alone has often some heavy and evil thoughts, and construeth everything in the worst sense. Melancholy is an instrument of the devil, by which he accomplishes his wicked purposes. The deeper a person is plunged into that state, the more power the devil hath over him. To live in an open, public state is the safest. Openly, and amongst other persons, a man must live civilly and honestly, must appear to fear God, and do his duty towards men.—Luther.

Curious Calculations.—Few persons have any tolerable notion of the space which would be occupied by the population now living on this globe if congregated together; and as to the vast majority, the dead, the wildest conjectures have been indulged in. Some have even doubted whether such a number of human beings could find standing room on the whole face of the earth. Now, taking the present population of the earth to number one thousand millions, and assuming that the average population of the earth from the time of Adam till now has been half that number, and that the generations of men have averaged forty years each, we come to this conclusion—that the smallest county of England would afford sitting room for all the men, women and children, now on earth, and that a number of human beings equal to all that have ever lived on the face of the earth, might stand within the area of the largest county in England.

The Machinery of the Human Body.—Very few mechanics are aware how much machinery there is, in constant action, in their own bodies. Not only are there hinges and joints in bones, but there are valves in the veins, a force pump in the heart, and curiosities in other parts of the body equally striking. One of the muscles forms an actual pulley. The bones which support the body are made precisely in that form which has been ascertained by calculations and experiments, to be the strongest for pillars and supporting columns—that of hollow cylinders.

Tea Brands and their Meaning.—The following will interest housekeepers: 'Hyson' means 'before the rains,' or 'flourishing spring,' that is, early in the spring, hence it is often called 'Young Hyson.' 'Hyson skin' is composed of the refuse of other kinds, the native term for which is 'tea skins.' Refuse of still coarser descriptions, containing many stems, is called 'tea bones.' 'Bohea' is the name of the hills in the region where it is collected. 'Pekee,' or 'Poco,' means 'white hairs,' the down of tender leaves. 'Powehong,' 'folded plant.' 'Souchong,' 'small plant.' 'Twankay' is the name of a small river in the region where it is bought. 'Congo,' from a term signifying 'labor,' from the care required in its preparation.

☞ A gentleman in Kent, England, lately ate a plum in which a wasp was hid, which stung him so severely in the throat that he died.

BASHFULNESS IN YOUTH.

Young people, on their first admission to this outer world, are especially afflicted with false shame; so that it may be regarded as one of the moral diseases of the mind's infancy. It is at the bottom of a great deal of their shyness. They cannot feel at ease, because they mistrust something about themselves or their belongings, and have that feeling of bareness and exposure in the presence of unfamiliar eyes which attaches to sensitiveness under untried circumstances. Everything then assumes a magnified, exaggerated character, the place they occupy on the one hand, and the importance of the occasion on the other. The present company is the world, the universe, a convention of men and gods, all forming a deliberate and irreversible judgment upon them, and deciding to their disadvantage on account of some oddness, or awkwardness, or passing slip in themselves or in the necessaries about them. But, in most persons, time and experience bring so much humility as teaches them their insignificance. It is not, we soon learn, very likely that at any given time a mixed assemblage is thinking very much about us; and then the horror of a conspicuous position loses its main sting. This on the one hand; on the other, we are not as dependent on the award of society as we were. Even a roomful comprises to our enlarged imagination, by no means the whole creation. There is something worth caring for outside those walls. And also we have come to form a sort of estimate of ourselves. There is now a third party in the question, in the shape of self-respect. We realize that we are to ourselves of immeasurably more consequence than any one else can be to us. Thus, either by reason or the natural hardening and strengthening process of the outer air most people overcome any conspicuous display of the weakness. By the time youth is over, they have either accepted their position or set about in a business-like way to mend it.

DON'T SQUEEZE.

While we are growing very sensible, indeed, in the matter of dress as far as hoops, Balmoral skirts, warm stockings, and high necks, we are degenerating in some other matters quite as important. The corset now a necessary part of a woman's wardrobe, and, alas! when a woman does begin to wear corsets, she will wear them too small, and will tug at the laces until her breath becomes short, and she feels it necessary to refrain from anything like a comfortable meal. We say nothing against a well shaped corset worn loose, but there lies the difficulty. A loose corset injures the appearance of the figure instead of improving it, and people wear corsets that they may have small waists. All we can say is, don't squeeze, whatever you do; you may have a small waist, but you are exposing yourself to a dozen misfortunes which are as bad as a large waist. First, you'll surely have dyspepsia, and grow yellow, and cross, and unhappy; secondly, your hands will grow red; thirdly, your nose; fourthly, you will be unable to walk a mile at once; fifthly, dinner will be a misery; sixthly, your shoulder blades will increase in size and altitude; seventhly, your eyes will grow weak; eighthly, you will break down at thirty or thereabouts, and be a sickly old woman from that time forth. If these truths do not frighten women from tight corsets, perhaps the information that gentlemen generally do not admire what dressmakers call a "pretty figure" so much as a natural one, may have some influence.

A BEAUTIFUL SENTIMENT.

Clasp thy hands meekly over the still breast—they've no more work to do; close the weary eyes—they've no more tears to shed; part the damp locks—there's no more pain to bear. Closed alike to love's kind voice, and calumny's stinging whisper.

O, if in that stilled heart you have ruthlessly planted a thorn; if from that pleading eye you have carelessly turned away; if your loving glance, and kindly word, and clasping hand, have come—all too late—then God forgive you! No frown gathers on that marble brow as you gaze—no scorn curls the chiseled lip—no flush of wounded feelings mounts to the blue-veined temples.

God forgive you! for your feet, too, must shrink appalled from death's cold river—your faltering tongue asks: "Can this be death?" Your fading eye lingers lovingly on the sunny earth, your clammy hands feel its last feeble flutter.

O, rapacious grave! yet another victim for thy voiceless keeping! What! no words of greeting from the house-hold sleepers? No warm welcome from a sister's loving lips? No throb of pleasure from the dear maternal bosom?

Silent all!

O, if these broken limbs were never gathered up! If beyond death's swelling flood there were no eternal shore! If for the struggling bark there were no port of peace! If athwart that lowering cloud sprang no bright bow of promise!

Alas, for love if this be all,
And naught beyond.

"Some" Mosquitoes.—Long Tom S——, of the Third Maine Battery, (as brave a soldier and capital a fellow as there is in the army,) tells a story of how thick he once found the mosquitoes in the northern part of Wisconsin, that will convince anybody of his entire truthfulness.

"Muskeetees!" quoth Tom; "you never saw any in Jersey. I tell you they play 'Susan come,' on the head waters of the Wisconsin."

"Are they any thicker there than in other localities?" we ventured to ask.

"Thicker! Why, man alive, one night we were looking around for a place to camp, we struck a swarm of regular old heroes, and every time you struck out with your arm it left a hole just as plain as in any of our guns."

"Oh, Tom!" exclaimed a young lady relation, somewhat doubtfully.

"What? You don't believe it? When this war is over, just come along with me, and I'll show you the hole yet!"

If anybody has the hardihood to doubt Tom's word after that, he (or she) must be prepared to fight "six-feet-four in his stockings."

Mr. Slocum began to read:

HORRIBLE AND FATAL ACCIDENT.

It becomes our melancholy and painful duty to record the particulars of an accident that occurred at the lower mill, in this village, yesterday afternoon, by which a human being, in the prime of life, was hurried to that bourne from which, as the immortal Shakespeare says, no "traveler returns." Mr. David Jones, a workman, who has but few superiors, was superintending one of the large drums—"I wonder if 'twas a kettle drum, such as the sogers have," said Mrs. Slocum—when he became entangled. His arm was drawn around the drum, and finally his whole body was drawn over the shaft at a fearful rate. When his situation was discovered he had revolved with it about fifteen minutes, striking a huge [illegible] each revolution.

A MARITAL LESSON.

"Why is it," asked a lady acquaintance of ours one day, "that so many men seem anxious to get rid of their wives?" "Because," said we, "so few women exert themselves after marriage to make their presence indispensable to the happiness of their husbands!" And this is seriously true. When husband and wife have become thoroughly accustomed to each other—when all the little batteries of charms which both played off so skilfully before the wedding day have been exhausted—too many seem to think that nothing remains but the clanking of the legal chains which bind them to each other.—The wife seeks to develop in her affection no new attraction for her husband, and the latter, perceiving the lapse, begins to brood over an uncongeniality which does not exist, and to magnify the ills that do exist into unsurpassable obstacles in the way of his earthly felicity. This is the true secret. The woman who charmed before marriage can charm afterwards, if she will, though not of course by the same means.—There are a thousand ways if she could only study them out, in which she can make home so attractive that her husband will unconsciously dislike to absent himself from it, and so she can readily make herself the particular deity of the domestic pandemonium. This done, she may quietly laugh at all attempts to alienate her husband's inclinations; and with those inclinations will always go, in such cases, his active judgment.

THE TERRIBLE ACCIDENT ON THE LAFAYETTE AND INDIANAPOLIS RAILROAD.—We have already announced in our telegraphic columns the occurrence of a terrible railway accident near Lafayette, Indiana, on Monday last. The following particulars are from the Indianapolis Journal:

At 3.55 P. M. the passenger express train north, on the Lafayette and Indianapolis railroad, and extra stock train south, which left [illegible] at three o'clock, collided one and a half miles north of Culver's station, causing serious loss of life. The baggage car was driven clear through the first passenger car. Most of the killed were returned and furloughed soldiers, who had served over three years, and were returning home. One of the killed had been confined 12 months over his time in Libby Prison, and was just returning. One drafted man from Boone county was found with one leg broken, and the other lying near, with his boot, completely severed. One man, name unknown, had the whole top of his head taken clean off. Sixteen persons were almost instantly killed and a large number wounded, fourteen of whom have since died, among them J. G. Howard, of New York. Some fiend in human shape rifled some of the bodies while in the throes of death. A number of ladies were on the train, but none were hurt.

HEAVY BANK DEFALCATION IN NEW YORK.—Mr. Charles Winsor, for the last fourteen years paying teller of the Mercantile Bank, No. 191 Broadway, disappeared from his post on Saturday last, and has not since been heard from. On examining his cash account it was discovered that he was a defaulter to the amount of $207,000 in currency and $31,000 in gold. The bank offers a reward of $5,000 for his arrest and delivery to the authorities, and $15,000 for the recovery of the stolen money. Winsor, has been, enjoyed a good reputation, and was [illegible] by his numerous friends as worthy in every respect. AGGREGATE LABOR OF MANKIND.

Along with the compassion that is excited by listening to a tale of want, there is apt to arise, at that time, a feeling of astonishment that such a thing should be in a land like this. Perhaps, however, the true wonder is that want is not universal. One half of the race die before they have contributed an iota to the world's sustenance or their own. One-half of those who survive the period of childhood are women, who do not, as a general thing, contribute directly to the production of wealth. Of the men, many are sick, many are old, many are lazy, many are idle, many are wasteful, many are parasites. Those who do work, and live to the age of three-score years and ten, spend one third of their lives in bed, one twentieth at the table, one-sixth in recreation. Much of their time is wasted in mistakes. Much of what they succeed in producing is swept away by fire and flood.—During half of the year nature sleeps. One harvest in five proves a failure. Only a fraction of the earth's surface is capable of cultivation. A large part of the general labor is absorbed in the production of luxuries, in repairing the damages of war, in preparing for future conflicts, in the transportations of produce, and in journeys.—Probably not more than one-tenth of the whole amount of human force is expended in earning the world's daily bread. The standing marvel, therefore, of society is, not that any should suffer want, but that there should be any who do not.

Didn't Want to Go.—A Jerseyman was very sick, and was not expected to recover. His friends got around his bed and one of them said—

"John, do you feel willing to die?"

John "made an effort" to give his views on the subject, and answered, with his feeble voice—

"I—think—I'd rather stay—where—I'm better acquainted."
