

FRANCIS.

BEFORE THE ELECTION.
"Lincoln should be elected there will be no more drafts, for the rebellion will last but a few months longer. If you want to vote against more drafts, vote for Lincoln and a speedy ending of the war."—Rep. Paper.

December 19th, 1864, the election.
I took them at their word, I voted for them, I sat up all election night, I heard how they talked, I saw the Lincoln men all laughing, and said "The Copperheads are sick, there'll be another draft."

YANKEEDOM THE FAVORED LAND.

Before the Southern leaders took up arms against the government, they used to talk about forming a confederacy, by which New England would be left "out in the cold."
How little did they know of the future in store for her. Now, instead of being either cold or wet, New England is, like the Irishman's jacket, "both warm and dry."

THE GOOD TIME COMING.

The Republicans now have everything in their own hands, and Abraham Lincoln can manage the war, as he did the election, "in his own way." We have been told all along at any time during the past six months, that if Mr. Lincoln was re-elected, the "moral effect" of his endorsement by the Northern people, would cause the rebels to throw down their arms in despair, and make all possible haste to get back into the Union.

These things were to follow the re-election of Lincoln. Lincoln is re-elected. Now fetch on your good times.—J. Freeman.
