If a little manure was applied it was cropped and if was again exhausted, the left to lie in its nakedness exposed to the besting elements, in fit condition to be gored in gullies, without grass enoughly upon its surface to hide its hideosuness.—Many of these farmers were compelled to go to neighboring counties to buy their bread. Why, Ladies and Gentlemen, I cand distinctly remember, and so can many of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now stands the fourth of you, when this property upon which now property upon which to shape something for this occasion, that requires ignorance to insure success is earth, with finest woven fabrics and most returning to the industrious husbandman and why; whether the moon actually has bonnteously in basket and in store, was so

The very face of the country bears evidence of this fact, the existence and progress of this society and the attendance at its Fairs are further evia few exceptions to it in the shape of a class of men that we shall term conservative cultivators; and to illustrate the sentiments of this class of men, I will read you an article from the pages of the Country Gentle-

Two words are beginning to be coupled in the newspapers and to float about in the air, whose juxtaposition is the cause of many a demure chuckle among the rural population, -"Agricultural College." Separately, the words command all respect; uniately, the words command all respect; united, they are a living rejutation of the well known axiom that "the whole is equal to all its parts." On the contrary, so far are our farmers from believing this, that, while they acknowledge each part to be a very serious and important fact, they look upon the whole as the flimsiest of fallacies.

He merits elevation. cation of our government, and in fact the existence of the human race; and yet he has been too long looked down upon by even interiors, looked upon as a mere drudge. Now this should not be, and will not long be, if farmers and farmers' sons become properly educated and enlightened, to un-derstand more thoroughly the vital princithose surrounding fields, once barren and neglected. They are made to blossom as the rose compared with what they were. And what has done it, may I ask? Why, it is the persevering, ambitious and thinking for themselves class of men that have had the resolution to come out from those spell-bound customs and moonshine theories of our predecessors, that have had their heads as well as their shoulders to the wheel, with a determination and unyielding as the swells of the ocean, with a will that is bound to conquer when rightly diregted. Such I tell you are the men that put the machine in motion, which is now moving, and we are all moving with it, waether we know it or not: we are advancing in Agricultural knowledge, whether we are thinking for ourselves, or whether others are thinking for ourselves, or whether others are thinking for us; we can hardly avoid being borne with the current, however determined we may be in pulling back. Gen. Meude's Report.—A special despatch from Washington to the New York Commercial Advertiser says: Gen. Meade's account of the condition of the Carolinas and Virginia is very satisfactory. The people and the prominent citizens are everywhere disposed to accept frankly the issue of the war, and resume their former relations with the National Government. Arrangements were made by him, under the authority of the President, for the gradual withdrawal of the Federal troops and the resumption of the civil laws. The people acquiesce in submitting all disputes between the whites and blacks to the Provost Court.

The couches of the triclinium, or di-ning-room, are especially of extreme rich-ness. The flooring consists of an immense mossic, well preserved in parts, and of which the centre representative atable laid out for a grand dinner. In the middle on a large dish, may be seen a large peacock, with its tail spread out, and placed back to back with another bird, also of elegant plumage. Around them are arranged lobsters, one of which holds a blue egg in its claws, a second an oyster, which appears to be fri-Cassed, as it is open and covered with herbs; a third, a rat farci, and a fourth, a small vase filled with fried grasshoppers. Next comes a circle of dishes of fish, interspersed with others of partridges, hares and squir-rels, which all have their heads placed between their fore feet. Then comes a row of sausages of all forms, supported by one of eggs, oysters and olives, which in its turn is surrounded by a double circle of peaches, cherries, melons and other fruits and vegetables. The walls of the triclinium are covered with fresco psintings of birds, fruits, flowers, game and fish of all kinds, the whole interspersed with drawings which lend a charm to the whole not easy to describe. On a table of rare wood, carved and inlaid with gold, marble, agate, and lanis lazu!!, were found amphorae still contuining wine, and some goblets of onyx.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON'S FATHER.

The following obituary notice appeared in the Raleigh Star of January 10, 1812.
"Died in this city, on Saturday last, Jacob Johnson, who had for many years occupied so humble, but useful station in society. He was city constable, sexton and porter to the State Bank. ; in his last illness he was visited by the principal inhatitants of the city, by all of whom he was esteemed for his honesty, sobriety, and humane, friendly disposition. Among all to whom he was known and esteemed, none lamented him more (except perhaps his relatives.) than the publisher of this paper, for he owes his life on a particular occasion, to the boldness and humanity of Johnson." Jacob Johnson was the father of the present President of the United States.

At the time it was written Andrew Johnson was less than four years old—an age so young that the loss of his parent could not effect him at the time, one hundredth part as much as the reading of these lines are likely to do now—fifty-three years after they were written.
