

ODDS AND ENDS.

They have a queer specimen of human nature in North Carolina. Every body remembers the celebrated "Cousin Sally Dilard Case," and here is one respecting Dilard, which is not far behind it. The writer gives it under the head of "legal proceedings."

"You say your daddy did all this dithing? Do you know what he got for it?" inquired Colonel C. for defendant. "He never got nothing, as ever I heard of, that's what he never got," answered the witness. "Did your daddy get corn and bacon from defendant in payment for dithing?" "Never heard of his getting no corn or bacon."

"What did your daddy and his family live on, last summer?" "Wittles, mostly." "What sort of vittles?" "Well, meat and bread and some vittles key."

"Well, just he got the meat and vittles?" "Well, just from one, and then from the other?" "Did he get some of it from defendant?" "He mouht."

"Do you not know he got some of it from the defendant?" "I know he mouht and then again, you know, he mouhtin'."

"With considerable excitement, and in tones of thunder, the witness testified, "I answered the question, and no more of this dithing with your oath, did your daddy or did he not, get corn and bacon from the defendant for dithing?"

"Well now, he mouht, it didn't occurred at all, you know?"

"Here his honor interposes, and with a stern judicial frown addresses the witness thus: "Witness, you must answer the question, or the court will be compelled to deal with you. Can't you say yes or no?"

"Well, then, yes or no. Did or did not your daddy, get corn and bacon from the defendant at the time referred to?" inquired the court. Witness, now fully aroused and conscious of his danger— "Well, Judge, I can't edactly remember, you know, se'en as how it was a first, as one determined to do it, to the best of my rekolkshan, if my memory serves me right, he mouht and then he mouhtin'."
