A Man with a Big Foot.

We heard, a few days since, (says the Knickerkocker.) a laughable anecdote of a man with a big foot. He was a Buffalonian, who must be living now, for a man with so good a hold upon the ground is not likely to " drop off in a hurry. He stepped one day into the small shop of s boot maker, in the flourishing capital of old Erie, and asked Crispin if he could make him a pair of boots. Looking at his long splay pedal extremities, and then glencing at a huge uncut cow-hide that hung upon the wal', he said-

"Well, yes-I guess so." "What time will you have them done

To-day is Monday." " Well, it'll depend on eircumstances I guess I can have them done for you by Saturday."

On Saturday, therefore, the man colled for his boots.

" Have you got 'em done ?" said he, as be entered the little shop.

"No. I haven't-I coulded; it has rained every day since I took your mea-in my shop, and I can't work out doors in rainy weather!"

Take the Hat.

Bertholomew Willard, (called 'Barty' for short) was a queer customer, one very well known in the north of Vermont, for his careless vagabond habits, ready wit, and remarkable ready facility extempore at rhyming. Sitting one day in a village store, among a crowd of idlers who always gathered about him on his arrival, plied that he was unable to purchase a new a good rhy me on the old hat immediately—
