From the Home Journal. MY WIFE.

Long years are I meta child.

As through the world I past.
She was the first star of my life—
The dearest, and the last.

An angel child, by some strange fate,
To worth a dweller driven.
Who boacht her virtues to my heart,
And left her wings in heaven.

I dr amt not that this shild of love Would mine forever be,
That she had some to tread this world,
This weary world, with me.
But as in kindness, side by side,
We wandered that by clay.
The more I loved her, and the more
the seemed inclined to stay.

Two strange, that from that very hour t seemed, through some uncarthly power But seemed, through semi-A pleasant thing to hear; And if perchance her centle ye for marked a leaf in mine. Twas turned to smiles by her kind heart, And treasured on its shrine.

Around my growing destiny
Her hopes all contered were.
For much I true to much this world.
A pleasant from the her?
And still, we han she seemed content.
To bear as rougher safe.
Together with the pays also found.
Whilst heating at my heart.

And thus to rether, hand in hand, And thus to either, name in name, We trot this value of tears; Our youth departing, but our love Increasing with our years. Foresting and that early world, Made up of gref and slo. But leving in the world above, And a bright world within.

The cheek that closely presses mine, Is forcewed new by years, For we have known the cares of life, And we care wept its fears; hat find was ever kind so us.

There seems a belighter would in view, For its than sife and me.
And on, the sign of my youth,

There is no reason therefore, why an unmanly and unworthy jealousy should be entertained against those portious of our county, or those persons, most benefited by a common good.

Improvements in progress in Mifflinburg, especially among the young, indicate the true Railroad spirit. The work of paving the streets is pushed with much energy, notwithstanding the croaking of some "old fogevs," and if completed as well as portions which I saw, her citizens will never regret it, and visitors will pronounce it a "capital investment."
