

French Wit.

"In the world," said M., "there are three sorts of friends: your friends who like you—your friends who do not care for you—and your friends who hate you."

A lady, aged ninety, said to Fontenelle at ninety-five, "Death has forgotten us." "Silly! not a word," said Fontenelle, placing his finger upon his mouth.

Mariette de Turenne, dining at M. Lamoignon's, the host inquired of his guest if his courage was never shaken at the commencement of a battle. "Yes," said Turenne, "I sometimes undergo great nervous excitement; but there are in the army a great number of soldiers officers and soldiers who experience none whatever."

In a large company, many details of the gluttony and gourmandise of various sovereigns were mentioned. "What would you have?" said M. de Brogny; "in the name of Heaven, would you have? These poor kings must do something, and it is as necessary they should eat as Jack, Tom, or Harry."

A certain gentleman who shall be nameless, had been, for thirty years, in the habit of passing his evenings at Madame H.'s. At length his wife died. People thought he would marry the lady whose house he frequented, and his best friends encouraged him to perpetrate the deed. He refused, saying, "In that case, my dear friends, where should I find a house of refuge to pass my evenings?"

A clever man, M., who had run counter to the general opinions, pronounced himself against a popular work. In all societies, he was answered, that the public had come to a very different conclusion from his. "The public!" he rejoined, "how many fools must you collect together to form a public?"

I once said to an agreeable misanthrope, who had introduced to me a young friend of his, "Your friend, my dear sir, no worldly tact; he knows nothing whatever of the usages of life." "Ah!" said R., "he is already as mournful and downcast as if he knew every tittle of that which you reproach him with utter ignorance."

The Chevalier de Montigny lived for a time in a provincial town of no note. On his return to the capital, his friends were condoling with him as to the wretched society, &c. "You are quite mistaken," cried he; "the good company of that little town is like good company every where, and the bad company is most excellent."

Madame de Talmon, seeing M. D. Rich elion, instead of having attention on herself, paying court to Madame de Brionne, a very pretty woman without the least mind, said to him, "Marshall, you are not kind, but I believe you are a little deaf."

M. de ——— asked the Bishop of ——— to lend him a country box, to which he never went. The Bishop answered, "Don't you know it is necessary to have a place where you never go—a place in which you fancy you might be happy if you went there?" M. de ———, after a momentary silence, answered, "That's true, and this feeling it is which has made the idea of Paris so popular."

A village doctor went to visit a patient in a neighboring hamlet, and took with him his gun, that he might wing any game he encountered in crossing the fields. A peasant, meeting him on the way, asked whether he was going? "To see a patient," was the answer. "What, then," said the peasant, "do you really fear to miss him in the ordinary way that you take your gun with you?"

Gabrieli asked for singing for two months, 50000 ducats of the Empress Catherine of Russia. "Why," said the empress, "none of my field-marshal's are paid after that rate." "In that case," replied La Gabrieli, "your majesty may make your field-marshal's sing."

The editor of the Chicago Democrat, ("Long" John Wentworth, Esq. M. C.) some years ago published for Gov. Duncan a proclamation for Thanksgiving, without even consulting him. The first Governor knew of it, he heard it read from the pulpit. All the Chicago clergymen, however, noticed it, and the day was kept in the customary manner, wherever the proclamation was known. The sermons were as able, the dinners were as good, and the balls and evening parties as agreeable as if the proclamation had been a genuine one.

An old gentleman traveling some years ago, inside the Bath mail, had two ladies, sisters, for companions. The younger, an invalid, soon fell asleep, and the old gentleman expressed his regret to see so charming a young lady in ill health. "Ah, yes, indeed," sighed the elder sister, "a disease of the heart." "Dear me," was the sympathetic response, "at her age! Ossification, perhaps?" "Ossification?" "Oh, no, a lieutenant!"

PREPARING FOR A STORM.—A few nights ago Mr. Bodkin, who had been out taking his glass and pipe, on going home late, borrowed an umbrella, and when his wife's tongue was loosened, he sat up in bed and spread out the parachute. "What do you have that here for?" "Why, my dear, I expected a heavy storm to-night, and so I came prepared."

In less than five minutes Mrs. Bodkin was fast asleep.
