In the House, the afternoon was spent in discussing the bill to recharter the Mechanies' Bank of Philadelphia upon the payment of $125,000, as a bonus, the sum being appropriated to finish the North Branch Canal. Some opposed the Bank, others opposed the Canal, and others still, friendly to both, opposed any such unnecessary linking of two measures, both of which were in themselves right, and would receive their support. The debate was animated, and a decision staved off.

In the evening a meeting of Demagogues House, to aid the support of those at Bultimore and elsewhere engaged in a "strike."
