Wit and humor.

Old Virginia.

An Illinois sucker took a great dislike to a foppish young Virginian, who, a few weeks since, was fellow passenger with him on one of our steamboats

The Virginian was cautiously combing his hair, brushing his boots-to all which movements the Sacker took exceptions, as being what he termed " a little too nice by half." He finally took up his chair beside the Virginian, and began,-

"Whar might you be from, stranger?" he asked.

"I am from Virginia, sir," politely soswered the gent.

" From 'old Virginia,' I suppose," said the Sucker.

"Yes, sir, from old Virginia," was the gent's reply.

"You are pooty high up thar in the pictures," continued Sucker.

"I don't know what you mean," says the Virginian.

"O nothing," says the Sucker, "but that you are desp'rate rich, and have been brought up right nice."

"If the information will gratify you in THAT large and desirable property on smoothing down his hair, "I belong to one of the first fumilies." "Ob, of course," answered Sucker.

"Well," he continued, "bein' as you belong to the fust, I'll jist give you two finished rooms on the third. A Kitchen of the fattest shoats in all Illinois, of you'll only find me a feller that belongs to one good water, and all the necessary outof the second Virginny families."

"You want to quarrel with me, sir," said the Virginian.

"No, stranger, not an atom," answered the Sucker, "but I never seed one of the second families, and I'd gin something to get a sight at one of them. I know to her unrivalled assortment of second families, and I'd gin semething to just look like John Randolph."

This modified the Virginian, the hint of Talmas, Mantillas, Capes, Aprons, Sacks, &c. a resemblance to the statesman was flattering to his feelings, and he acknowledged relationship to the orator.

" He, you know, continued the Sucker." was a decendant of the Ingin gal, Pocahontas, wasn't he?"

"You are quite right, sir," answered the other.

"Well, stranger," says the Sucker, "se you know there is another thing puzzles me, and its this: I never seed a Virginian that didn't claim descendance from an Ingin, John Randolph, or a nigger."

We need not add that the Sucker rolled off his chair rather suddenly. They were separated and kept apart until the Sucker landed at his home.

As he stepped ashore, he caught sight of the Virginian on the upper deck, and hailed him with,

"I say, old Virginny, remember-two fat shoats for the first feller you find that han at any other shop in this country, without belongs to the second Virginuy family." exception. He has the largest and best assortment in sti Central Penneylyania, and is determined to Senator HOUSTON, at the close of his late speech in opposition to the resolution of General Cass on our foreign policy, took occasion to nearste the full state in the senator of Walaut and Feb 11, 18 2 GEORGE H. An occurrence which once took place will, perhaps, illus-trate this way of boasting better than any comment of mine could do. I refer to an incident which has been described by a great man-I mean Washington Irving, a man known to fame, and of high literary distinction. Washington Irving, on one occasion, describing the boasting of some of us, said that the best illustration which he could possibly give of it, would be to narrate an incident which occurred on board a. British reseal in which he had board a British vessel in which he had come over from England. There were on board the ship two large Gallipagos turtles, a very large animal, as it is known, something resembling terrapins. I presume many Senators who have never seen tartles have seen terrapins. They are a delicious morecau for the epicure or the gourmand. These turtles would sally forth their disposition one to another. They assortment of would approach formally, slowly at first, then make a sudden movement, then another, reconnoitering with great care, their eyes scintillating fire, and their breath deep-toned ; at last they approached near cach other, and coming almost in contact, usually kept in a well furnished store. one raised with great caution, a little tremulous, but nerving himself at the other, as is their custom, and gave vent to an expression of his indignation.
