Lewisburg & Spruce Creek. The Philad Daily News of the 23d inst. devotes a column to the proposed "Lewis-now, Will two roads be profitable? This burg, Center & Spruce Creek," and the "Tyrone & Lock Haven," Railroads, and their probable influence upon the prosperity of Philadelphia. It quotes a portion of the statisties of the former route from the Chronicle of three weeks ago, and adds : "It will thus be seen that the position of our city is daily becoming a defensive, instead of being, as it should, an offensive ene, for trade, and as we have many times the design to pass the Western trade by and around us, but the heart of our own State is to be made, by these improvements to which we are referring, subsidiary to the City of New York."

That once settled, and the means are poured out like water.

Well, we confess it would be a novelty to the good people of the interior to see the capitalists and business men of Philadelphia waking up, in that kind of style, to her true interests, and those of the patient old Commonwealth which she has so long been in the habit of considering as mortgaged to berself, exclusively, without any reciprocal obligations on her part. As regards the Spruce Creek road, we suppose it would make little difference to the people along the fine of the road, whose money builds it, so that it is completed and put into successful operation. But the experience of the past justifies the home friends. of this enterprise in looking with vastly more confidence to New York for aid and comfort, than to anything that Philadelphia is likely to offer.

This Extension is the occasion of a fierce contest. The Sunbury & Eric Company exerts every fair and unfair means, secret as well as public, to check it; and all the rival towns to our own are doing everything possible to cut us off from railway intercourse with the world. This apparently unequal contest, the Northern part of Union county has thus far maintained manfully and successfully.

The first movement to kill the extension was to excite public hatred against issuing of the promised Bonds. The most false alarms were peddled from door to door. Of the Press, the Chronicle stood out fair and square for the Railroad; the remainder used it as Party interests dictated, or were filled with the most foul attacks upon the Road, its many friends at home (and its few friends abroad) in general, and Lewisburg in particular. By extraordinary exertions, a mass meeting was got up

And now, instead of our being able to any form whatever.

The question is is the point to be met. From a careful survey over both routes, we are strongly persuaded that, at no distant day, both would be thronged to their utmost capacity. That the faith of the Company is pledged to the Extension, no one can deny. But here, the opponents of Extension are making another stand, we hope the last. They start a rumor, below us, that "Lewbefore remarked, it is not simply time to isburg wants to cut off Dry Valley;" and wake up, or to act, but to fend off, and if above us, that " Lewisburg wants to cut possible get to ourselves again a free track off White Deer;" and in Lewisburg, that on which we can trade.
