Gastronomical View of the Question.

The New Berliners make little if any attempts to argue the Division question publicly, through the press, but trust to private intercourse with the people-and their ingenuity in circulating arguments often are, it would be amusing to put on record and compare their various stories, thus set in motion. One of the objections seriously urged, is this - We can't get as charge higher for board!

Well, let us see. In the first place, Freeburg, Selinsgrove, Middleburg, Mif-Rinburg, and Lewisburg, are all surrounded by farming communities more rich and with estables of all kinds more abundant, than New Berlin. There is no natural inability for those towns to compete with New Berlin, in the line of larder, bedding, charge : next year may reveal it. or oats. In the second place, there are thousands who can vouch from personal knowledge of the other towns, that they can and do get " living " there; and that as hearty, as robust and as well-to-do looking people can be found in other towns as the "great metropolis," New Berlin. Chickens and wheat, peaches and turkies, sausage and strongest Democratic counties in the State schnitts, sour-krout and werst, cost no -have, by their Democratic County Conmore in Miffliaburg or Middleburg than ventions, advocated the Sale of the Public in New Berlin; and there is sufficient Works. capital in Selinsgrove and Lewisburg to compete with New Berlin in the provision line generally.
