Ber In last week's Chemicle we gave a mournful song of the late Mrs. Judson, (Fanny Forester) written ere her husband's death was made known to her, and when his agonizing absence and the death of her boy touched her very heart's core. Quite different was the jubilant strain with which she announced the birth of a daughter, in the following exquisite lines which are to be found in the Colombian Magazine, of June, 1848: Mn Bird.

Ere last year's moon had left the sky,

From morn till evening's purple tinge. Two rose leaves, with a silken fringe Shut soldly on her starry eyes.

There's not in Ind a loveher bird; Broad earth owns not a happeer ne-Oh God, thou hast a fountain stirred, Whose waters never more shall rest!

[Correspondence of the Lewisburg Chronicle.]

Helpelbero, June 12, 1854. A few weeks' residence in the little renowned city Heidelberg, impresses me most favorably. Indeed it requires a longer time to develope and properly appreciate the treasure of its beauties. It was my fortune last fall to see it in its rapid deline to a winter skeleton. I now have all the advantage, which the plight of summer beauty and exuberance proffers.

At present, a considerable of life and animation pervades the winding streets and shaded walks, by the daily and constant arrival and departure of strangers. course to the Khine. ers' big wagons, and merry lads and lasses, through the opening of the woods even to the Hardt mountains.
