

LEWISBURG CHRONICLE & WEST BRANCH FARMER.

BAN PROHIBITION SONG.

From every fertile prairie,
From forest spreading wide,
From town and crowded city,
From every side,
How! how! the shout is rising!
One universal strain—
Prepare for Prohibition!

Give us the Law of Maine!

Too long the licensed dealer
His liquid fire has sold,

Too long have we been burdened

That system to uphold!

No longer will we bear it—

Blot out the damning stain

From Pennsylvania's statutes,

As from the State of Maine!

No legalized camp-selling,

Our country's curse and shame;

Down, down with every grogery,

Quench every still-house flame;

A different legislation!

We must and will obtain;

Hurrah for Prohibition!

Give us the Law of Maine!

How long, O Lord! the orphan

And smiting widow cry,

With up, up, up, up, up, up, up,

The world-wide degradation,

Who could but can't restrain,

Sighs, O for Prohibition!

Give me the Law of Maine!

Then up, ye Temperance army,

Nor lay your arm'd!

Till victory crown the day;

Till over Pennsylvania

(By law enacted) reigns

Health, virtue, and destruction,

As in the State of Maine!

Lime a Preservative of Potatoes.

We find the following report of experiments in keeping potatoes in the English Gardeners' Chronicle. The experiments were made in a more humid climate than our own, and where greater precautions are necessary to prevent stored potatoes from decaying. There are however, some localities within the "shaftwick" of the Farm Journal where these hints may be of service.

1. Twelve bushels of potatoes, lifted October 25th, 1853, stored with lime, the lime being placed in small bundles in the middle of each sack. Tuberous preserved; whereas, some of the same potatoes stored without lime, were much affected.

2. Fifty bushels of potatoes, dug up to the end of October, were pitted with three bushels of quick lime, the latter being placed at the bottom of the pit, and covered over with a thick layer of grass. On opening the pit it was found that the diseased tubers did not amount to more than two dozen. Tubers stored in the ordinary way, in pits without lime, were almost entirely destroyed by disease.

3. 4. 5. Potatoes stored with and without lime quite untouched by the disease.

6. Roots stored in a large chest or box with lime, and the latter being placed in a small clothes-basket, and covered over with faggots. On opening the box the tubers were found quite healthy, while some that had been kept in a cellar without lime were much diseased.

7. Twenty bushels of tubers were placed in a large bin with three bushels of lime, the latter forming a stratum at the bottom, and covered over with a thick layer of coarse cinders. At the end of three months the roots were found to be quite sound, while another lot which had been put into another bin without lime were very much diseased.

8. Potatoes housed in sacks, one or two large bunches of lime being put into each sack, tubers quite dry, and all preserved.

9. Potatoes first dried by exposure on a gravel walk to the heat of the sun, and then stored away in large boxes with lime, all healthy. Tubers housed in their natural condition became diseased.

10. Potatoes housed with lime, all healthy.

11. Same result.

12. Several bushels of potatoes were pitted with lime, and when examined, at the expiration of several months, were found to remain untouched by the disease. Roots pitted without lime became quite rotten.

13. Two or three hundred bushels of potatoes were divided into four equal lots. Three of these were pitted with lime, the other in the ordinary way. In the first of the three lots stored with lime, the lime was placed at the bottom of the pit, with the proper precautions; in the second it was thrown into a conical heap in the centre of the tubers; and in the third and last, it was placed on the top of the potatoes, being separated from the latter by a layer of brushwood, &c. On examining the tubers at the end of some months, those in the first pit were found to be much discolored, while those contained in the other three were nearly healthy. "The best results," says this correspondent, "I am disposed to think were obtained by placing the lime on the top of the tubers, and this is the plan I intend to follow."

The following is the copy of a will left by a man who chose to be his own lawyer.

"This is the last will and testament of me, John Thomas. I give all my things to my relations, to be divided amongst them the best way they can."

"N.B.—If any body kicks up a row, or makes any fuss about it, he isn't to have anything."

Mrs. Partington advises all young people afflicted with preparation of the heart to apply the extract of mustard, to draw out the information, and she says she has never known a failure when this device was followed.
