rrespondence of Lewisburg Chronicle. PITTSBURG, Nov. 14, 1854.

The lightning train floated me off from Harrisburg last evening ; and there being fact grades and wide panoramics of the Conemaugh. Swinging around curves, Row, N. Y. and straining up grades, furnished our principal consciousness of winding river, and lefty mountain, as we plunged thro' the rayless and solemn midnight, as thro' as if ficeing with winged impulse from the swift pursuit of some unimaginable horror.

-This begrimmed and smoky city occupies a triangular plateau at the junction of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers, DANIEL hemmed in on the east by a body of lofty hills ; with Allegheny City on the flatt at the foot of the hills on the opposite bank Monongahela, with glass-works, &c. at its scattered in all directions, sending up columns of black smoke that darken the the houses and clothing, like the plagues of Egypt, only it does no harm. The lumbent flames and mild heat of the bituminous coal, burned in open grates, contrasts very pleasantly with the fierce, consuming heat of anthracite in close stoves, and prompts a wish for a "swop."
