Death of Clinton Welch, Esq.

SAD DROWNING CASE.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock on Thursday evening, 18th January, the persons on Delaware avenue, near Chestnut street, were startled by cries of help coming from the Delaware. The night was dark, and they could not see the drowning man, but everything possible was done to rescue him. A barrel was thrown overboard, and ropes were used, to no purpose. The cries soon ceased, and the unfortunate man sunk to rise no more. His hat floated on the water, and was obtained by one of the Sixth Ward Police, who succeeded yesterday in discovering the name of the man to be Clinton Welch, of Lewisburg, Union county, Pa., a lawyer, who had been to Harrisburg to see the inauguration ceremonies, and coming to this city put up at the American Hotel. He is supposed to have lost his way, and in the darkness walked overboard. It is important that lumps should be placed along the Delaware wharves, to prevent the accidents that are so frequently occurring.—Phila. News, Saturday last.

Mr. Welch left home for Shamokin on Monday evening, and did not visit Harrisburg. The body has not been found at latest accounts. His age was 27 years, his last name—native place, Bellefonte. He leaves a much afflicted wife, and many friends who admired his affectionate disposition and amiability of manners. By a singular coincidence, the evening of his death was a year to a day from the evening of his marriage; and the brides maid on the occasion (Miss M. E. S.) was also buried the day of his death!

Presbyterian Banner.

This able weekly journal enters upon a new year much improved, and has demonstrated by experiment that a family religious journal can be sustained by the large denomination it serves, if they will extend it a small amount of aid. It is still published by Dr. M. KINNEY, 554 South Fourth St., Philadelphia.

We are favored with a "Dutch Botschaft in the German language" from the Transcribing Department in the House, at Harrisburg, which took two of the new K. N. Clerks to frank, and neither of them could read!
