Improvements about Town.

We intend, once or twice a year, to notice such buildings under process of erection in Lewisburg, and other improvements, as may convey to our distant readers a just view of our progress.

The spire of the Christian Chapel is now completed, and we know not where in Central Pennsylvania a more graceful or architecturally-orthodox elevation can be found. We suppose the house will soon be ready for dedicalion.

Philip Billmeyer is crecting on North 3d Street, opposite the German Reformed house ler was dealt with according to law. In of worship, a superior dwelling house. We observe two new houses on Market street at the west enderecting for Alex. Lewis and Wm. T. Reitmeyer; and also, on the extreme line of the town westward, are numbers of new dwellings, the foundation of many future improvements, to insure their safety. and indicative of individual and general prosperity. There is nothing more wise than for men of limited means to get homes of their own, to adorn, improve, and enlarge as they have opportunity. Two-thirds of the dwellings in our Borough have been commenced in just this way, and those who by industry and careful foresight thus began, are now among Union. our most respected and independent citizens. The little hero took his companion on his back and struck for the shore, but was compelled to swim some 80 wards before finding a place to land his precious charge. That accomplished, he returned for his hat which had been lost in the struggle and succeeded in securing it. On being asked by his father why he went back into the water, he re-
