Greenland has been followed by Dr. Kane, and surveyed, with a coast line to wards the Atlantic, fronting due North until a stupendous glacier checked their progress. This mast of the rose in lofty gran lear to a height of five hundred feet, abutting into the sea. It undoubtly is the only obstacle to the insularity of Greenland -or, in other words, the only barrier be-tween Greenland and the Atlantic. It is however, an effectual barrier to all future explorations. This glacier, in spite of the difficulties of fulling bergs, was followed out to sea, the party raining themselves eighty miles along its base, and traced it Gold pencils with or without pens from 75 cts. fires, into a new northern land. (This glacier to $4,00 is, we believe, the largest discovered by any navigator.)
