Republican Caucus at Washington. WASHINGTON, March 24-11 o'clock, P. M.-The Republican members of Congress held a Caucus to-night, at the Capitol. There was a full attendence, and speeches were made by Messrs. Campbell of Pa., Campbell of Ohio, Seward, Galloway, Pennington, Giddings, and others.

Mr. Giddings urged a thorough union, as in Ohio, on the principle of requiring no one to surrender his convictions on other points, if sound on the Nebraska question.

Mr. Horton, of Ohio, thought they must look much to men, so as not to get objectionable candidates. He advocates a union of the Anti-Nebraskaites. He said the country was looking with peculiar interest to Washington for sugestions as to a platform and candidates, and he recommended, without abating principle, that that conpervative feeling should be respected.

Mr. Galloway carnestly argued that freedom was the great overshadowing issue, and he was satisfied that even the Anti-Nebraska Americans, as he found in New. Hampshire, so regarded it.

Mr. Campbell, of Pa., said the American feeling was very strong in the central

Mr. Campbell, of Ohio referred to his pledge, when the Nebraska bill passed, that he would oppose it to the bitter end -and now he would carry it out to the letter. He would vote for no man who endorsed that iniquity and outrage. He advocated a union of all the elements of opposition to the Administration, like that which so gloriously triumphed in Ohio last autumn, and pointed to that State as a noble monument of freedom.

Messrs. Allison and Covode, of Penn'a, said that, in their part of the State, the Anti-Nebraska feeling was predominant, and concurred in the views expressed by Mr. Campbell, of Penn'a, as to the necessity of harmony and union, to carry that Mr. Seward made the closing speech, and, like Mr. Campbell, of Ohio, was frequently applauded. He urged action, saying that the great practical question was to rescue Kansas from the tyrant's grasp, by her admission into the Union as a State. He hoped the House would push the bill for that purpose through its passage, and send it to the Senate. In the event of failure in the latter body, the President might find difficulty in obtaining money from Congress to "crush out" the free settlers of the State of Kannas The issue having been made, the people will see to the vindication of the principle in the election of President.

The session lasted till 11 o'clock, and then adjourned till next Monday.
