the comsummation of the Kansas plot!

"In the Kansas Nebraska act, however, this requirement, as applicable to the whole constitution, had not been inserted, and the convention were not bound by its terms to submit any others portion of the intrument to an election, except that which relates to the 'domestic institution' of playery. This will be rendered clear by a simple reference to its language. It was 'not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to tions in their own way. According to the plain construction of the sentence, the words 'domestic institutions' bave a direct as they have an appropriate reference to slavery. 'Domestie institutions' are limited to the family. The relation between master and slave and a few others are 'domestic institutions,' and are entirely distinct from institutions of a political character. Besides, there was no question then before Congress, nor indeed has there since been any serious question before the people of Kansas, or the country, except that which relates to the domestic institution' of slavery.
"The convention, after an angry and excited debate, finally determined, by a majority of only two, to submit the question of slavery to the people, though at the last forty-three of the fifty delegates present affixed their signatures to the consti-

"A large majority of the convention were in favor of establishing Slavery in Kansas. They accordingly inserted an article in the constitution for this purpose, similar in form to those which had been adopted by other territorial conventions."

Aye, Honorable Sir, not only "a large majority of the Convention," but every member of the Convention, as you well know, were in favor not so much of "establishing slavery in Kansas," for you argue that it is already "established" there but of perpetuating it. The only question was how to do it, and the farce of "submitting" a single section was at last decided upon as the best way to pacify the North.

Your language might lead some to infer that there might have been some oppowhom they professed to act, nor can you

"In the schedule, however, providing for the transition from a territorial to a State government, the question has been fairly and explicitly referred to the people whether they will have a constitution with or without slavery.' It declares that, before the constitution adopted by the convention 'shall be sent to Congress for admission into the Union as a State, an election shall be held to decide this question, at which all the white male inhabitants of the Territory, above the age of 21, are entitled to vote. They are to vote by ballot; and 'the ballots cast at said election shall be endorsed "constitution with slavery" and "constitution with no slavery." If there be a majority in favor of the constitution with slavery,' then it is to be transmitted vention in its original form. If, on the contrary, there shall be a majority in favor of the 'constitution with no slavery,' then the article providing for slavery shall be stricken from the constitution by the presperty in Slaves now in the Territory State. shall in no manner be interfered with; and in that event it is made his duty to have the constitution thus ratified transmitted to the Congress of the United the Union. "At this election, every citizen will have an opportunity of expressing his opinion by his vote 'whether Kansas shall be received into the Union with or without slavery,' and thus this exciting question may be peacefully settled in the very mode required by the organic law. The election will be held under legitimate authority, and if any portion of the inhabitants shall refuse to vote, a fair opportunity to do so
