Kansas, which relates to the question of 930. be submitted to the people. To say that it is an infamous outrage upon the people of Kansas and the principles of popular sorreignty as embodied in the law organiring the Territories of Kansas and Ne- ed, and the Legislature will have a Free braska, but expresses the views of a great State majority. majority of the people both North and The merubers of the Convention have manifested a consistent disregard of the people, and betrayed a fear, on their part, that, if they submitted the Constituwould not be sustained. Conscious of their numercial weakness, they hope to apen. permanently engraft upon the State the institution of slavery by stratagem. It was the leading feature of the Kansas Nebrasks Act, and the main issue advocated by the Administration party in the last Presidential canvass, that the people of the Territories should regulate their own to return to the Territory. domestic affairs, and adjudicate all mooted questions, at the ballot-box; and we see no reason why the present Congress and Administration should violate this equita- ture, deprecating the action of the Leble principle by accepting the Kansas Constitution as it at present stands. The the Constitution to the vote of the people, inalienable right of the voters of the Territory at large to decide for themselves the character of their State government, is subjugated by this Constitutional Convention-representing but a tithe of the people of Kansas-and stultifies the principle of popular sovreignty. The voters are left no choice, further than a question of numbers; if they vote for the "Constitution with slavery" the number of slaves that can be taken into the Territory is indefinite; if they vote "Constitution with no slavery" they prohibit the further introduction of slaves into the Territory, but what slavery there is there now, with its natural increase, is perpetuated for ever!
