I dreamed a dream the other night, When everything was hushed and still, Which made each hair stand strait with fright, Suff as the porcupine's last quilf.
Methought that pethocats had grown
To such a vast and monstrous size, That there was room for them alone And none for man-beneath the skies!

The beasts, and every creeping thing Had died; the flowers bloomed no more, The grass and tender herbs of spring Ten million leagues of crinoline

Stretched over like funereal pall, And on the cold and cheerless scene The sun's warm rays could never fall. On Ararat's cloud-curtained peak

The last man stood, with pallid face, Sick, trembling, weary, worn and weak--Sad remnant of a smothering race; In vain—alas! poor man! in vain— His footsteps sought that rest of old, For clouds of skirts soon filled the plain, And hid the mountain in their fold.

Still bigger grew those spheres of white, Until they reached the summit high, And streamed above the wretched wight Like snowy banners in the sky;
The man looked o'er the precipice,

"Make way for petiticoats!" he cried;
And plunging down the dark abyss,
Made way for petiticoats—and died!

A ST. VALENTINE LEGEND.

[The American Hollanders, or Hudson river and Mohawk river "Low Dutch" and their descendants, are fast losing those characteristics which are rather caricatured in the numerous writings of Washington Irving. They were quiet, honest, sensible people, much resembling their cousins, the High Dutch or Germans of Pennsylvania. The annexed story is very life like.]

-Quite a number of years ago, in New York or Manhattan island, near what is now ----- Square, there stood a dilapidated, wooden, Dutch built dwelling, known as "the Old Red House." Looking at that section of the city, now so thickly ecttled, the little aneedote I am about to relate will seem like fiction; for the old house stood entirely alone, and above it, for nearly a mile, there was no other dwelling. The Red House was the terror of the young, for it was whispered about among them that it was haunted. In it dwelt Hans ----, a fat, good natured Dutchman. Hans kept some kind of store or stopping place, where the few straggling wayfarers, who had occasion to visit the city, disposed of their vegetables, or made purchases-for there were, even then, some cultivated spots between that point and what was called the French Tan yards, situated near Forty Second street.

Before the door of that old house, stood a wooden trough; here, stragglers would stop to let their horses drink; here, too, at all times of the day, might Hans be smoking his pipe, looking happy, and, 1 dare say, feeling so. He had lost his frau, but Providence, as if to console him for a sorrow he perhaps did not properly feel, had left him a daughter, his Betsey ! Betsey was the idol of his heart. She was had an aim. That aim was to see his Betsey comfortably settled in life. Hans had long fixed his eye upon a young counten Duyvel creek-John by name-and he came regular once a week to give his AT THE borse a dripk at the old trough, and take a mug of eider with Hans, made little progress in the way of courtship. This, though it was not exactly agreeable to Hans, he could not well see how to remedy.

Grown desperate by the delay, he was determined to make one grand effort. CONFECTIONERIES, Accordingly, on a memorable Friday (that being Hans' lucky day,) he filled his pipe and sat down in the porch to wait the arrival of Shon. There was nothing perceptible in the appearance of the man to indicate that a matter of great moment was on hand; nothing could be observed, save, perhaps, that the curling smoke was a little more dense, as he puffed it vigorously from his mouth.

At length, the expected Shon came in sight, and Betsey was ordered to bring out a dish of her best dough-nuts, and a mug of sparkling eider. "I think," soliloquised Hans, "I shall know what ish what, before I see de bottom of dat mug of shider."

Shon drove up as usual, unhitched the bridle of his horse in the same old way, and received the same old greeting, and finally took the same old seat. First disappeared the cakes and cider. At length, after a long puff, Hans said, "Te cakes pe goot, Shon."

"Ya," Shon replied.

"Petsey makes dem," rejoined Hans. "Ya," again said Shon

"Now, I tells you what get something; he"-(of course, meaning the)-"will get one cow, one feather led-one goot Frau; and, when I dies, everything I has-you knows mine Petsey. To be sure, he is not so tall-but then he is the wider out. I likes you, Shon; will you have the cow, the feather bed, and mine Petsey for your Frau ?"

"Ya, ya !" responded Shon, so he seized the mug and offered it to Hans.

The bargain was closed, and I do not believe Shon has ever had cause to regret it. The propriety of old Haus became valuable. Shon got not only a good fran, the Old Stand on South a cow, and feather bed, but, on the death. Third street, near Market, and respectfully a cow, and feather bed, but, on the death relicits the patronage of his friends and the collision, which happened some fifteen public generally. CHARLES P. HESS. years after, sufficient to buy an estate near 1 Lawisburg, May 22, 1850

Yonkers, where he still resides, with his good frau, who is the shortest and widest woman in the place. Shon takes particular pride in a crop of forty or fifty white heads, the joint property of the children of himself and Petsey. So, there lives old 'Squire John —, under the shadow of his own vine, where he still has a mug and a pipe for all the old friends of bimself and of Hans Vanderdonk, deceased.

The Syracuse Journal says a man. not a thousand miles from Syracuse, baving made an assignment, was called upon by a New York creditor, to whom he exhibited his books, and with whom proposed to settle at 50 cents on the dollar.

The New York man replied, "how can you pay 50 cents on the dollar ? Your assets will not pay over 40 cents."

"Well, never mind that," says the unfortunate assignor, "if my assets will not pay the 50 cents, I will make up the deficiency out of my own pocket!"

Mr. Joseph E. Hover - A trial of your Liquid Hair Dye will convince the most skeptical that it is a safe, elegant and efficacious preparation. Unlike many others, it has in several instances proved servicessble in the cure of some cataneous quiptions on the head, and I have no hesitation in commending it to those requires such an application. Very respectfully,

THE ACKNOWLEDGED

C HA M PION:

THE RECENT TRIALS at Reading have endorsed the current of public opinion, and confirmed the vertex of more than 200 societable free, proving conclusively that "Herring's" is the start ears Trax with Not dens.

"Ou the 26th of February all the members of the Committee met in witness the Safes and books and papers, (placed in them) and were perfectly satisfied that all was right. The day following, the bunning took place, under the superintendations of the Committee. After a fair end impartial burning for five hours, the Safe of Messes Evans & Watson was first opened, the Safe being on five inside, and the collected partially consumed, while the contents in the Safe of Messes Farresia & Herring were in good condition, said no five inside."

The attempt made by other parties to bolster up the reputation of a Safe which hor failled so signally in accidental fires in Philadelphia, Ranstead Place, by taking one out of an agent's store, (It. A. Lantan) made double thickness, (different from those they sell, to "burn up" one of Herring's, hair as thick) has met with its true reward. Herring's Safe could not be burnt, proving conclusively that the only rollable Safe now made is "Herrang's," of which over 15,000 are now in actual use and more than 200 have been tried by fire sulhout a single last.

Salamander Safes No. 26 S. Fourth St., Philadelphia. Truth is Mighty, and Must Pravail. Report of the Committee appointed to super-intend the Burning of the Iron Safes, at Reading, February 27, 1857. READENG, March 4.

The undersigned, members of the committee, do respectfully report, that we saw the two Safes originally greed upon by Farrels & Herring and Evans & Watson, slaced side by side in a furnace, viz: The Safe in use by the Paymaster of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad the Paymaster of the Philadelphia and Reading Ratiroad Company, in his office at Reading, manufactured by Farries & Herring, and the Safe in use by H. A. Lants, in his store, manufactured by Evans & Watson, and put in books and payers precisely alike.

The fire was started at $1\(\frac{1}{2}\) o'clock, A. M., and kept up until four cords of green hickory, two cords dry cask and half chestant top wood were entirely consumed, the whole under the superintendence of the subscribers, members of the Committee. The Safe were then cooled off with water, after which they were opened, and the books and papers taken out by the Committee and taken to H. A. Lanta's store for public examination, after they were first examined and marked by the Committee. The books and papers taken from the Safe manufactured by were first examined and marked by the commutate. The books and papers taken from the Safe manufactured by Evans & Watson were but slightly affected by the intense heat, while those taken from the safe manufactured by Farrels & Herring were, in our judgment, damaged fully iffleen per cent, more than those taken from Evans & Watson & Safe.

Having been absent during the burning, we fully co-incide with the above statement of the condition of the papers and books taken our of the respective Safes. G. A. NICOLLE.

Evans & Walson have now on hand 300,000 pounds of the above SAFES, which they effer for sale on better terms than any other manufacturer in the United States
