of her citizens, whose loss would, in the present evil time, be irreparable. Deprived of her noble chief magistrate, and of the talented Herr Lindau, our citizens would be left without any one to guide them, and might even become disunited among themselves and so fall an easy prey to their enemies. Be prevailed upon, therefore, to remain behind, and send in your place two other courageous and eloquent burghers, authorized to treat with the enemy in the name of our city."

"Wolf is right," cried the assembled burghers. "We will neither part with our burgher-master, nor with Herr Lindau."

Herr Adler stood a moment silent and thoughtful, and then said: "It is not, perhaps, worse to go than to stay behind; but if I and Herr Lindau yield to the wishes of our burghers, who, I ask, is prepared to take our place? Who has sufficient confidence in his own courage and eloquence to appear fearless and self possessed before the enemy?"

A deep silence succeeded this question. The burghers looked irresolutely at each other, and no one announced himself ready to go on the dangerous errand.

"Then I will go alone," said Wolf, cheerfully. "The Lord will be my guide, my shield, and my defence. Under his protection, I may bid defiance to every danger."

"I will go with you, neighbor," said the schoolmaster, stepping forward and shaking the brave weaver by the hand. "I feel myself especially called upon," he continued, "to undertake the office. My late brother's only son has joined the enemy, and has so distinguished himself by his bravery, that he has attained the rank of a general officer amongst them. Perhaps I may get a sight of him, and call upon him to intercede for us with his commander-in-chief."

"Then we will go together, neighbor," said Wolf, with great satisfaction. "A divided burthen is not half the weight."

"Might I be permitted to make the third?" said a well known voice from among the crowd; and, elbowing his way forward, appeared Schelle, the barber.

"The barber! the barber!" cried every one in astonishment. "Was he not in the jail? How came he here?"

He had, in truth, been committed to Naumburg prison in consequence of some tavern brawl.

"The most natural way in the world," answered Schelle, glibly. "The approach of the enemy and the alarm-bell had so completely turned my jailor's head, that he unlocked instead of locking the prison doors and went off. Now, when a caged bird finds the door open, what does he do but hop out and fly merrily away. This last, however, I could not do, because wife and children detained me here. But I do think that now, when all our lives are in danger, the few inconsiderate words which I uttered may be forgotten. You are in want of eloquent messengers to the enemy. Now, I believe I have given proof enough that I am no dumb fish. Loquacity got me into jail, and I think it may fairly help me out again." I have breathed so long the close prison air, and so long been obliged to be still, that I can not resist the opportunity of taking a walk, though it may may prove my last. Beloved fellow citizens, the bath master Schelle will pronounce such a touching address to the enemy, that Cicero and Demosthenes shall appear bunglers in comparison."

"This chattering," said Herr Adler, doubtfully, "may be the destruction of us all. Little and to the point is what is wanted—not a wearisome babbling."

"If my speech should not produce its due effect upon the enemy," answered Schelle, "I will entertain them with such drollery, that the most surly among them will be unable to refrain from laughing. And if I once make them laugh, we shall have won."

"What do you say to Schelle's proposal?" said Adler to the weaver and the schoolmaster.

"The words of a fool," said Wolf, smiling, "have sometimes more effect than those of ten wise men. If Schelle feels within himself an irresistible desire to accompany us, I should not wish to oppose it."

"I quite agree with Wolf," said Herr Muller.

"All good things are in threes!" exclaimed Schelle, offering his hand to his two companions; "then here we are all ready to start."

"Shall we not," suggested Muller, "first go home and take leave of our families? We can not conceal from ourselves the great probability there is that we shall never see them again."

"But too gladly would I see my dear wife and children once more, to kiss them and bless them for the last time," said Wolf. "But will they not shake our resolution with their entreaties and lamentations? Could we remain steadfast when they besought us not to go? It is better for us to set off without delay."

"May a blessing go with you," said the burgher-master, deeply moved, "and give power to your words. Our goods we freely offer to the enemy; only let them spare the town from fire and sword. May you return to us in safety, and as messengers of peace."

The multitude now moved slowly forward to the gates of the town, and in their midst the three envoys walked hand in hand, when cries of bitter sorrow and distress were suddenly heard in their rear. The startled crowd made way, and three females, followed by a troop of sobbing children, in breathless haste, rushed after their departing relatives. In a moment Wolf and Schelle found themselves surrounded, seized, and held so fast that they could not move a step forward, whilst Muller's little daughter hung round his neck, and, with her pale, beseeching face, and silent tears, proved at least as eloquent a pleader as Wolf's eight children.

"Father," said Johanna, in her low sweet tones, "pray, pray, stay with us."

"Where are you going," cried Mrs. Wolf, passionately. "Is it to death, and without taking leave of us? Stay with me and your children; that is where you ought to be! You belong to us, and for our sakes you must take care of yourself. Let others go to the enemy. Return home with us, and await in patience what Providence will decide for us."

"Stay with us, father!" cried Wolf's children, holding him fast. "Do not go to the enemy, who will kill you, or we and mother will all die together of grief. Stay with us, dear father!"

"Stay with us, father!" sobbed Schelle's four children; "we have not seen you for so long a time."

"My dear wife," said Wolf, his voice trembling with emotion, "I wished to spare you and our children this sorrow, and therefore I did not first take leave of you. Do not break my heart with your lamentations and entreaties. All my resolution is required to face the terrible danger we are about to encounter. The duty I have undertaken is not a light one. Do not increase the burden. When the welfare of a whole town is concerned, individuals must not be considered. I have once before said this to you, when the pestilence visited our city, and we were mercifully preserved in the midst of danger. A greater danger now threatens Naumburg, with all its inhabitants. We are about to venture our lives, in the hope of being permitted to avert it."

"Why can not some one else go," sobbed Mrs. Wolf, "instead of you?"

"So every wife would say to her husband," answered Wolf. "Some one must go; and to decide by lot would have taken too much time; for life and death hang upon every hour. So do not detain us longer. Farewell, my beloved wife. Farewell, my children. Should I not return, obey your mother, and be her comfort and support as long as she lives. The Almighty bless you! Should the enemy decide upon destroying us all, may we meet again in another world to part no more. Bless you my children."

Wolf kissed and caressed them all in turn, and gave each one a fervent blessing. The same was done by the schoolmaster and by Schelle, whose loquacity seemed for the moment quite to have forsaken him. It was a scene that brought tears to the eyes of all who beheld it. Amidst much weeping and lamentation, the crowd arrived at the gate of the town. Before the three messengers passed across the drawbridge, they once more pressed their weeping families to their hearts. Their wives and children knelt down together at the gate, where they remained until their husbands vanished from their eyes. "Pray for us and for yourselves," were Wolf's parting words.

A TERRIBLE FAMILY.—James Nichols who is said to have wantonly killed Frank Grier in Pittsylvania County, Va., is reported to have killed his own mother a few years ago. Another brother by the name of Arnold is supposed to have shot his father and killed him; and Burnwell, a still older brother, killed Daniel Ashwell. Strange to say no one of them has been punished.—Bedford (Va.) Democrat.

A man named Ephraim Carter, in Jefferson county, Miss., was shot dead from a house in which he and others were "horning" a bridal party. The Coroner's jury rendered a verdict of justifiable homicide.

There is before the Virginia Senate an exemption bill. Among the articles exempted is, "1 Prayer Book, 1 Bible, 1 Negro." This shows that slavery is "a divine institution."

NORMAL SCHOOL,
Freeburg, Snyder County, Pa.
THE Fourth Semi-Annual Session of this Institution will commence on Tuesday, Jan'y 5, and continue 22 weeks. Its location is pleasant and healthy. Buildings new and commodious, and Terms low. It is the constant aim of the Teachers to impart sound instruction, and carefully develope and direct the Mental, Moral and Physical energies of the students. The course of study will thoroughly prepare those pursuing it for College, the study of a Profession or business pursuits. The

NORMAL DEPARTMENT
Of last Session succeeded beyond expectations, and its members passed creditable examinations. Many young ladies and gentlemen attended it who have procured schools and are now among the most successful teachers.

Desirous of affording others the same facilities for thoroughly preparing themselves to become Teachers, this Department will be reopened—on the 22d of MARCH—under still more favorable auspices. The Public School system will prove a complete failure unless such Teachers are provided for it, and this can only be done by the UNITED efforts of Directors, Teachers, and friends of Education. Their co-operation is therefore respectfully solicited.

A Call to Farmers.
Farmers, drop your tools—pause a little—read this, and reflect!!
"FARMERS' PROMOTION BOOK."
A NEW and scientific manuring system, for the cultivation and increase of all kinds of grain, grasses, fodder and pasture, upon all kinds of soil, proved by actual experiments and based upon evident truths, designed to improve agriculture in all its branches; represented by upwards of one hundred and fifty engravings of the most valuable grasses and plants connected with the system, by DR. C. G. REINHOLD, of Boalsburg, Centre Co., Penna.

RECOMMENDATION.
In this treatise it will be seen that the object has been to give the farmer that kind of information which enables him to make practical application to fertilise his land and increase his grain, fodder and pasturage. The doctrines, as taught by this unassuming and fodder and pasture cultivation system, are rational, clear and evident, and suggest an improvement in the mode of agriculture hitherto unknown to our farmers, and which, if adopted, and carefully practiced can not fail to advance the interests of the farming community. Such a work has been much wanted, as it fills a void which has long been felt, but which there has hitherto been no attempt to supply. And as farmers of Centre and Huntingdon counties we recommend the work to every farmer, as they will reap the greatest possible benefit from it.

DENTAL CARD.
THE new method of inserting artificial Teeth, Gum, &c., known as Allen's Continuous Gum Work, is, without exception, the best improvement ever made in the art of Dentistry. This work, when properly constructed, is the most beautiful, the cleanest, combines the greatest strength with durability, and adds more to a clear and distinct articulation, than any other kind of work ever brought before the public. And not only this. By a beautiful discovery in combination with this style of work, we can give the face its natural expression, without, in the least, interfering with the usefulness of the teeth in mastication.

I would take this method of informing those interested that I have purchased the Patent Right for this valuable improvement, of the inventor, John Allen, (now of New York,) for the above several localities, and that I am now manufacturing in article of Teeth and Gums that will compare favorably with any thing in that line that has ever been made in this or any other country. I ask all, and especially those that need teeth if they have engaged them or not, to call, and examine my specimens.

M'REA'S CELEBRATED
LIQUID GLUE!
THE GREAT ADHESIVE. Most useful article ever invented, for home use or office, surpassing in utility every other glue, mucilage, paste or cement yet known. ALWAYS READY FOR APPLICATION, whether on Paper, Cloth, Leather, Furniture, Porcelain, China, Marble or Glass. For manufacturing Fancy Articles, Toys, etc., it has no superior, not only possessing greater strength than any other article but will adhere more quickly, besides leaving no stain where the parts are joined. Never Fails.
Within the last three years upwards of 20,000 bottles of this justly celebrated LIQUID GLUE have been sold, and the great convenience which it has proved in every case, has deservedly secured for it a demand which its merits so far justify. In order to meet, if possible, the orders filled by all who have used it, that otherwise are forthcoming similar articles are offered to the public.

HOVER'S LIQUID HAIR DYE.
THE testimony of Prof. Booth and Dr. Beasley having previously been published, the following is now added:
From Prof. MCCLINTOCK, formerly Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine in the Female Medical College of Pennsylvania, and late Professor of Surgery in the American College of Medicine, &c.
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27, 1856.
Mr. Joseph E. Hover—A friend of mine (Judge Hall) has given me a bottle of your Hair Dye, and I must say that it is a most delightful article. It is not only free from all injurious properties, but is actually beneficial to the hair and health of the head. I have no hesitation in recommending it to my friends and the public.
Yours respectfully, J. K. MCCLINTOCK, M.D.
Mr. Hover—Sir: I have used your Liquid Hair Dye for some time, and find it to be all you represent it. It is a most beautiful article, and I cheerfully recommend it to the public.
Yours, &c., JOHN HALL.

HERRING'S SAFE.

THE ACKNOWLEDGED CHAMPION!
THE RECENT TRIALS of Herring's Safes ordered by the Corporation of Philadelphia, and by the Trustees of Iron Safes at Reading, have confirmed the assertion that
"HERRING'S" is the best SAFE that was ever USED.
Extract from the Committee's report to the Trust of Iron Safes at Reading, Feb. 27, 1857.
"On the 24th of February all the members of the Committee met to witness the Safes and books and papers delivered in them and were forcibly satisfied that all was right. The day following the burning took place under the superintendence of the Committee. Before the appointed hour on Wednesday, the 25th, all persons interested were present, the Safes being on the premises, and the contents partially consumed, while the outside in the midst of flames. Herring's Herring were in good condition, and so free inside."
Reading, March 2, 1857.
(Signed) H. F. FELIX, }
P. S. COLEMAN, } Committee.
A. B. PEACOCK, }
And endorsed by over 50 of the best men of Reading.
The above Safes can be inspected at 34 Walnut Street, where the public can satisfy themselves of the great superiority of the Herrings over all others. Remember, none of the defeated are using Herring's Iron Door Salamander!
FARRELL & HERRING,
34 Walnut Street, Philadelphia.
Having been absent during the burning, we fully coincide with the above statement of the condition of the papers and books taken out of the respective Safes.

Truth is Mighty, and Must Prevail.
Report of the Committee appointed to superintend the Burning of the Iron Safes, at Reading, February 27, 1857.
READING, March 4.
The undersigned, members of the committee, do respectfully report, that we saw the two Safes originally agreed upon by Farrels & Herring and Evans & Watson, placed side by side in a furnace, viz: The Safe in use by the Proprietor of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, in his office at Reading, manufactured by Farrels & Herring, and the Safe in use by H. A. Lantz, in his store, manufactured by Evans & Watson, and put in books and papers precisely alike.
The fire was started at 8½ o'clock, A. M., and kept up until four o'clock of green hickory, two cords dry oak and half a bushel of tar, and it was entirely consumed, the Safes, while under the superintendence of the subscribers, members of the Committee. The Safes were then cooled off with water, after which they were opened, and the books and papers taken out by the Committee and taken to H. A. Lantz's store for public examination, after they were first examined and marked by the Committee. The books and papers taken from the Safe manufactured by Evans & Watson were not slightly affected by the intense heat, while those taken from the Safe manufactured by Farrels & Herring were, in our judgment, damaged fully fifteen per cent. more than those taken from Evans & Watson's Safe.
We believe the above to have been a fair and impartial trial of the respective qualities of both Safes.
JACOB H. DYSHER,
DANIEL S. HUNTER.
Having been absent during the burning, we fully coincide with the above statement of the condition of the papers and books taken out of the respective Safes.
