How is Kansas to be Disposed of?

THE PRESIDENT'S VIEWS. If Kansas had adopted the English Swindle, she would have been admitted as a State, her vote in favor of that rascality being the In accordance with the provisions of an act evidence, in the eye of the President, of her anxiety to come into the Union; but her reington Union, the PRESIDENT'S ORGAN : "After all the contests which have wasted the proposition therein submitted, and made in conformity with the requirements of said act, have ascertained them to be by counties and precincts as follows:

Judging from the arguments must successfully used in the canvass the nomination. which has just terminated, that decision was made upon the deliberate conviction that the people of Kansas were either unable or un-willing to undertake the support of a State government. Of this fact none were so competent to decide as the people of Kansas. Their decision is now made, and LET IT HE

Now, to our mind, it would seem more rational to conclude that the people of Kansas rejected the English proposition because it was one of the grossest rascalities of the day, and not because they wish to stay out of the Union. They are anxious to come in as a State, but they are not willing to pay the price cient, and reliable in his devotion to the cause of dishonor to get in. The President lays down a bribe to coax them to come in; they down a bribe to coax them to come in; they large we can not take the bribe: therefore says say, we can not take the bribe; therefore says the President, they do not want to come in! This is Presidential logic.

The Richmond Enquirer, (Douglasite,) one of the few Southern papers that can see the length of its nose before its face, is not slow to perceive the drift of this logic. It says:

"Whether it is the part of wisdom to per-petuate agitation, and to make the refusal to admit Kansas the the division of parties on sectional grounds, may well address itself to the reflection of the come the cry of Northern fanaticism, and unposition Accepted," there were east one thou-sand seven hundred and eighty-eight votes, rally, we fear, to an overwhelming victory. In our opinion, it would be highly improper to adopt a ratio of population for a Stave State, dif-ferent from that appointed for a Free State. Equal and exact justice to both Stave and Free States is the only ground upon which Southern States can maintain their claim to equal rights in the Federal Union. A policy the same for both Slave and Tree States, should be the demand of the South. Upon such a policy they can maintain their just demands at the hands of the North, and upon such a platform only can the Southern States hope to meet their allies at the North."

True. If the present population of Kansas is sufficient to entitle her to admission as a SLAVE STATE, (which would have been accomplished if the English proposition had been accepted.) it is enough to entitle her to admission as a FREE STATE; and if that admission is refused by the administration, the refusal will be made the rallying cry of the opposition in 1860. Correspondence of the Lewisburg Chronicle

PHILADA., Sept. 1, 1858. I sit down to write to you in the midst of a perfect tumult. Philadelphia is turned inside out, and the great wonder is how so many people are contained in its streets, lanes, and allies, as are abroad to-day. This you know is the day set apart by our municipal daddies for the cele- taught by Bishop Soule to the preachbration of the successful laying of the Atlantic cable, and most unanimously are they being seconded. I can not quite determine whether it is the in- lowing. It even defines the limits of nate love of a holiday which seems safe speculation; and if observed by to belong to our nature, or joy at the business men would take the edge off great event which has occasioned such of panies: "Brethren, my rule is this, a general turn-out, but certain it is and I advise you to adopt it : Never

Jackson. We are celebrating a very great event, truly, but there are few of those who join in the general enthusiasm who will estimate it by the proper standard. Not one in every thousand looks upon it as intended for any other purpose, or capable of attaining any other end, than the uses of commerce and diplomacy. I do not presume, of course, that it is to be USED in any other way, but its mission will be none the less effective because carried on silently, while it is answering the end for which it was designed by those who had the boldness to conceive, and the nerve and perseverance to carry it to completion. The telegraphic column of an evening paper which has just been put into my hand, contains a despatch from Landon THIS MORNING! To one who has toiled across that long track from shore to shore, and counted the weary miles as they were passed over, and seen old ocean in its wildest grandeur, the thought is almost overwhelming. For more than SIXTY DAYS AND NIGHTS, I have been on the Atlantic in one trip from England to America; and yet, at four o'clock today, I am reading a despatch penned in London not SIX HOURS ago!

In the midst of all the bold flights of eloquence which have been employed to describe the great event and its consequences, it would be presumption in me to stop for a moment to give you my speculations, and indeed the imagination of any man must fall short of a just comprehension of what it is And proud nations arise, and then sink in decay,

While the savans of the old world -the continental world-fret their brains to produce a substitute for the diamond, and are content to employ their capital in the preservation of crumbling frescoes and collections of smoky pictures; while they rest their greatness on the building of mighty docks, and magnificent palaces, where luxury and pride produce effeminacy, infidelity, and crime; let it be still the object of the Anglo-Saxon to push forward these mighty works for which he has been so distinguished, and which are every day bringing our race nearer to the great point of complete eman-cipation. Yours, S.H.F.
