

Answer a Post according to his Policy. One of the earliest Presidents of Jefferson College, Penn'a., was Dr. M'ILLAN, a man of much gravity and dignity of manners. In those days, it was customary for students, when meeting the President, to remove the hat from the head, place it under the left arm, make a profound bow, and pass the compliment of the day.

Among the students was Tom Deacon, eccentric fellow, son of a rich planter on the Mississippi. "Flash of money," the height of Tom's ambition was to sport a gold headed cane, and gallant the Greek Professor's daughters. His mind was more deeply engrossed with backgammon than with mathematics, and he was more "deeply read" in the lore of Chesterfield than in that of Homer and Virgil. In short, he was a shallow-brained, silly headed fellow, and, as may be supposed, a great favorite with a certain class of ladies who mistake impudence for wit, and fine clothes and affected manners for refinement and solid accomplishments.

But to our tale. Tom was one day walking down street, arm in arm with his friend, John Smith, who had a spice of the wag about him. Seeing the President a few paces before them, Tom hastily inquired—"Smith, what is Good morning, sir, in Latin?" "Ego sum stultus," was the reply, without a moment's hesitation.

Meeting the President, Tom, after the most approved style of donkeyism, at the same time making a profound bow, greeted him with—"Ego sum stultus?" "I am aware of it," responded the President, making a slight bow.

This proved rather unsatisfactory. Tom posted off to the room of his friend Byles, whom he saluted with—"Deacon, what is the translation of this sentence—"Ego sum stultus?" "I am a fool!" responded the unsophisticated "Deacon."

This told the whole story. As novel writers say, Tom's platitude may be more easily imagined than described. Whether the students bored him about it or not, and whether the Professor's daughters ever heard of it or not, dependent saith not, but history records that the next day he was seen in the street, with the Old Tom as a passenger.

A CLEAR CHARGE.—At the conclusion of a long trial, in one of the American courts, the Judge thus addressed "the patient twelve": "If the Jury believe, from the evidence, that the plaintiff and defendant were partners in the grocery, and that the plaintiff bought out the defendant and gave his note for the interest, and that the defendant paid for the note by delivering to the plaintiff a cow, which he warranted, and the warranty was broken by reason of the unsoundness of the cow, and he drove the cow back and tendered her to the defendant, but the defendant refused to receive her, and the plaintiff took her home, and put a heavy yoke on her, to prevent her jolking or yoking, she broke her neck, and died, and if the Jury believe that the defendant's interest in the grocery were worthless, and the cow good for nothing, either for milk or beef, then the Jury must find out for themselves how they will decide this case; for the court, if it understands itself, and it rather thinks it does, don't know how such a case should be decided."

ORIGIN OF FAMILIAR PHRASES.—The term "masterly inactivity" originated with Sir James Mackintosh. "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," which everybody who did not suppose it was in the Bible, credited to Sterne, was stolen by him from George Herbert, who translated it from the French of Henry Estienne. "The cup that cheers but not inebriates," was "conveyed" by Cowper from Bishop Berkeley, in his "Siris." Wordsworth's "The child is father of the man," is traced from him to Milton, and from Milton to Sir Thomas Moore. "Like angels' visits, few and far between," is the offspring of "Hook"—it is not Thomas Campbell's original thought. Old John Norris (1658) used it, and after him Robert Blair as late as 1746. "There's a guile time coming" is Scott's phrase in "Rob Roy," and "the almighty dollar" is Washington Irving's happy hit.

A good one is told of the President and a committee who called upon him about the tariff some time ago. "Ah!" said his Excellency, "if only Gladney Jones were in Congress, he could do a great deal of good for you." "Why, then," was the reply of one of the party, "did he resign his seat, and refuse to fulfill his promises made before he was elected?" Jones was dropped!

A pious old lady could not get the run of a certain hymn, in which Canaan and Jordan were spoken of. But she could well remember it, she said: "So to the Jews old—something—stood White—between—two—trees."

"First run of Shad."—Mr. Shad, a colored resident of the town of Raleigh, Canada West, has been elected a councilman of that township. He received a large majority of votes over his white opponent.

The lawyer's relation to society is like that of a sourcerer to the cornfield: coarse, but he effects nothing of positive good, he still exerts a wholesome influence from the terror his presence inspires.

"Can you return my love, most adorable Julia?" said a lover to his innamorata. "Certainly, with pleasure," replied the heartless witch, "I am sure I don't want to."
