ROBERT EMORY PATTISON.

Hon. Robert Emory Pattison, twice Governor of Pennsylvania the foremost Democrat of the State, one of the national leaders of the party, and a lawyer and financier of conspicuous ability died at his home in Overbrook, near Philadelphia, Monday morning at 6:25 o'clock. The funeral took place yesterday (Thursday) at 11 o'clock, from the Pattison home in Overbrook.

Strenuous political activity was largely responsible for the illness which proved fatal to the former Governor. His health broke some years ago under the strain of too much campaigning. He was far from robust when he entered the gubernatorial contest against Judge Pennypacker in the fall of 1902, and that effort destroyed much of his vitality. For weeks he was on the stump, touring the State, speaking by day and night. Out in all sorts of weather, subjected to sudden and frequent changes of temperature and to an enormous nervous strain, he retired from the canvass with his health entirely wrecked.

For a year and a half he indulged himself in recuperation, and rallied perceptibly. In that time he was careful not to overwork, and he took as much care of his health as a man of his wonted vigor and temperament could bring himself to exercise.

While attending the Democratic State Convention we remarked to a friend that we didn't think the ex-Governor looked so well. A marked change was quite perceptible in his physique and his countenance was sallow and deeply grooved. It was noticed that on his early arrival at the national convention he was far from strong, and the overwork and exposure there brought on the attack of pneumonia, to which he succumbed.

Governor Pattison was a man of splendid courage, rare good judgment and right impulse. In public life he was faithful to his obligations and just to the people. Beginning early in the participation in public affairs his exceptionally good record in achievement was the result mainly of a purpose to fill the full measure of his duty. As controller of Philadelphia he was painstaking as well as capable and as Governor subsequently, twice chosen, he was guided by conscience and sustained by courage in the performance of his duty, as he understood it. In his death Pennsylvania sustains a great loss. Democrats and Republicans alike mourn the death of this patriot.

CAUSE OF CREDIT.

We can find in all places a certain element that never has more than just their regular income, no matter how large the amount of that income may be. If perchance one of the family is laid upon the bed of affliction for a time and a doctor is in attendance, or an incidental expense is imposed upon the household, a debt is incurred which at once brings distress upon the whole family.

The statement has frequently been made that intoxication has made ravages in the industrial world; that it has lowered the efficiency of the mills and factories and other industrial plants, and that the worker is deteriorating.

In most cases this extravagance is directly traceable to the drinking habit, while in many vanity and greed is the cause. There is no question but that the former of these is by far the worst. It is not only a curse to the party that thus indulges but cuts hard upon the earnings of the temperate and more deserving.

In the work shop, where a number are employed, the hard-working, temperate man, who accomplishes the most most by steady and persistent perseverance, receives just the same amount for his day's wages as the irresponsible, non-dependent drinking man. This should not be, and is not in all cases, but there are many instances in which the sad plight cannot be overcome, other than to decrease the wages of both.

Vanity next finds itself leading far in advance the income of many who exercise a strong desire to out-do neighbors and others, who are equally extravagant, in dress and the furnishing of their homes.

The ravenous appetite of another class seems to demand all the expensive dainties and new dishes the seasons afford. These three classes of chronic ailments that have befallen the human race always was and always will be, but wouldn't a community be blessed without them? The credit system could be abolished and a cash basis established.

WE MOVE FORWARD.

At last it is decided that Danville will figure more conspicuously as an up-to-date town. Mill street will be paved and the borough will furnish its own light.

The special election on Tuesday fully decided it to be so. Borough Council sometime ago agreed that it should be so, and in order to make things satisfactory to all a special election was held.

Nine hundred and thirteen of our tax payers voted. Seven hundred and ninety of these were satisfied to increase the indebtedness for the advancement of the appearance and future benefit of the city, while the other one hundred and twenty-three believed they would better the city by endeavoring to keep out of debt and have accounts square.

The vote polled was near about half that on other occasions. Of course the heavy rain toward evening kept many from going to the poles, but we are satisfied that all who opposed the improvements voted so, and were those who didn't vote, but would have done so hadn't the rain interfered, given a chance, they would have surely cast their ballots in favor.

It can be plainly seen that the greater majority of our citizens are for progress and enterprise, and we believe always were so, but failed to elect the proper men for the various borough offices. Present council is composed of energetic, live, business men; who are willing to make a few self-sacrifices and devote a little attention to public good.

The intelligencer says, let the good work go on, and may the projectors never weary in their labors for honest and progressive advancement in all city reforms and improvements.

While in conversation with one of our enterprising builders and contractors, we were informed that more building is being done this summer in Danville than was done here for years, and that business in his line is first rate. This is very encouraging, for every time we have a little boom in our industrial works a scarcity in dwelling houses is sorely felt. Long may the good work continue, and our beautiful little city increase in prosperity and size.

REVIEW OF THE CAMPAIGN.

In a review of the great national Presidential campaign, now being waged, the New York World, one of the best and fairest Democratic papers in America, touches on the most important events in the following language: The most important political event of the week was, of course, the formal nomination of Mr. Roosevelt that he had been nominated for President.

Notification ceremonies have come to be regarded as the opening of the campaign. The candidate sounds the "keynote," as the thing is known in the queer jargon of politics, and it is assumed that the party will try to force the fight along the lines laid down in the speech of acceptance.

The exceptions, however, are almost as numerous as the examples under the rule. In 1876 Mr. McKinley, in his speech of acceptance, undertook to force the tariff to the front. Everybody knows how small a part the tariff played in the campaign. In 1900 Mr. Bryan devoted his speech of acceptance almost entirely to the Philippines and imperialism. The money question proved again to be the chief issue of the campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt in his speech of acceptance defined no "paramount" issue. He adhered closely to the platform and to Mr. Root's speech in the Chicago Convention, giving emphasis to the Republican party's record of achievement rather than to any particular issue of the campaign. The World has already pointed out how inevitable it is that Mr. Roosevelt himself is the predominant issue. Significantly enough, the President in his speech attempted to efface himself, as Mr. McKinley undertook to efface the money question in 1896, and as Mr. Bryan attempted the same impossible feat in 1900.

Next in political importance to the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt was the election of Mr. Taggart, of Indiana, to the Chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. His election has been received with moderate satisfaction in Democratic circles. There is general approval of the election of a Chairman from one of the pivotal States of the West, and some little regret that it was not possible to find a manager with more experience in national affairs than the Mayor of Indianapolis has acquired. Nevertheless, there is no sulking and no disposition to withhold enthusiastic and energetic support from the new Chairman. There has been no quibbling among Democratic leaders on that point.

The character and political reputation of many of Judge Parker's visitors have been sharply criticized, on the principle, evidently, that the molasses is to blame because the flies are attracted to it. Judge Parker is not responsible for the quality of his visitors. He could hardly be expected to take a club and drive objectionable politicians off his property. He receives everybody who calls, as Mr. McKinley did Canton in 1896.

The promiscuous rush to Esopus means only that the professional politicians in the Democratic party, with the politician's keenness of perception, see in Judge Parker's nomination good prospects of a Democratic victory. They have hurried to Esopus not so much because they wish to know Judge Parker as because they wish Judge Parker to acquaint them of a prospective President of their own party, and their unsolicited visits are merely symptomatic of general Democratic confidence and aggressiveness.

In this connection it is worth while to record the fact that the leader of Tammany Hall has stopped sulking and has called on his party's candidate for President, after waiting somewhat impatiently for an invitation that never came. Mayor McClellan likewise has been to Esopus, and it is understood that Tammany is seeking to have him nominated for Governor as part of the price of its cordial support of the ticket.

The Governorship is causing the Republicans no little anxiety as well, and they appreciate the necessity for naming the strongest candidate they can commandeer. It is significant that Gov. Odell has withdrawn his objection to the nomination of Elihu Root, and it seems probable that Mr. Root can have the nomination if he will accept it. Whether he will take it is still an open question, as he had repeatedly declared he did not desire the nomination, and has written to Gov. Odell a letter to that effect.

The week has seen a marked strengthening of Democratic lines everywhere. There is not the slightest doubt that most of the Gold Democrats who voted for McKinley in 1896 and in 1900 will support Judge Parker, and they will be reinforced by thousands of independent Republicans who distrust Mr. Roosevelt's impulsive temperament and consider him unfit for the duties of a constitutional President. Letters from many such Republicans to Judge Parker have already been printed in the World.

The campaign is opening with Democrats everywhere on the aggressive and the Republicans on the defensive. Candidates for Democratic nominations are springing up in States in which Democratic nominations have been going by default for the last ten years. It is everywhere recognized by Democrats and Republicans alike that Judge Parker has an excellent fighting chance, and the old-time Democratic enthusiasm is once more in evidence, which is not the least significant feature thus far of the campaign.

GRAY'S TRIBUTE TO PARKER.

Since Judge Parker was nominated he has been the recipient of many expressions of compliment and confidence, but none will be so highly valued as the words of Judge Gray.

It is well known that Judge Gray is a man who is not profuse in compliment. And from his position on the Federal bench he is not given to political utterances. When he breaks the judicial silence to declare that Judge Parker "stands for law as opposed to personal inspiration;" that "this is the path of safety," that "there is no just cause and no great business interest that may not feel secure under his care," it means much.

There is no abler man in the Democratic party than the former Delaware Senator, who was a member of President McKinley's peace commission that ended the Spanish war, of President Roosevelt's arbitration commission that ended the anthracite coal strike, and who is one of the most eminent Judges on the bench of the United States Circuit Court. There are many Democrats who believe that but for the accident of geography Judge Gray instead of Judge Parker might have been the Democratic candidate for President.

Certainly nobody will deny that Judge Gray is of Presidential size, and his high tribute to the qualifications, ability and character of Judge Parker is one of the noteworthy utterances of the campaign.

FAVORS AND RIGHTS AT THE FAIR.

The visit of President Roosevelt's sons to the World's Fair on Sunday by special permit was a characteristic example of our national humbug and hypocrisy and of the growing disposition to create privileged classes.

If Sunday sight-seeing at the Fair be so demoralizing as to require the exhibition to be closed to the public on that day, then it was a great wrong to contaminate the minds of these innocent lads by the scandalous experience. If the sight of the world's marvels be as harmless on Sunday as on any other day, then the admission of the President's sons by special favor was an advertisement of the hypocrisy of the rule that deprives the public of the same advantages to please a few bigoted busy-bodies.

Hundreds of thousands of people will fail to see the Fair, and so will be mentally the poorer for the rest of their lives, because its gates have been sealed on their only day of leisure. If we ever have another such exhibition it is to be hoped that its managers will have courage enough to refuse any Congressional appropriation made contingent upon any such invasion of popular rights.

Newport Society Note.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.) Far from the madding crowd's ignominious throng Theirs the manly deed, the lonely way; And did he curse the thing? Not on your life; Another's wife was out with him that day.

Is Roosevelt Honest?

It has been the custom of the Democratic press and people to refer to President Roosevelt as a model of personal integrity and honor. However widely men of our political faith differed from him with respect to principles and deprecated his policies, they invariably commended his personal probity. That was largely because in his earlier life and less important stations he was the outspoken foe of all forms of corruption and the earnest enemy of official venality.

But is he that now? In his present position of power and opportunity to enforce the principles of integrity he has certainly shown an indifference and we seriously doubt the honesty of a man who tolerates dishonesty.

Take for example the frauds in the Postoffice Department. The Bristow report showed the most shameless state of venality and the investigation made by lawyers BONAPART and CONRAD special counsel employed by the President himself, urged a more comprehensive and searching investigation. Yet when the investigation was proposed the President, in the greatest agitation, begged Senators and Representatives to vote against the proposition and even openly bribed them by offering government patronage and other official favors in consideration of opposition to the proposed investigation. Does that look like honesty? Is it customary for honest men to pursue such a course?

Last year every movement of the President was attended by the most ostentatious display of luxury. The special train in which he made his trip to the Yellowstone park with its provisions and equipment cost the Pennsylvania railroad $50,000 and his trips to Oyster Bay and other points were proportionately expensive. It has been asserted that the railroads reimbursed themselves for those expenses by "padding" their bills for carrying mails and that ROOSEVELT knew that an investigation would disclose the iniquity to public view. If that be true can he be regarded as a man of personal integrity? We should say not and add that his opposition to investigation confirms the rumor—Bellefonte Watchman.

The Slucom Criminals to the Bar.

The Federal Grand Jury has found indictments for manslaughter against Capt. Van Schieck of the Slucom and Inspectors Lumbert and Fleming. It has also indicted the principal officials of the Knickerbocker Company for aiding and abetting the principals in the crime. There is little confidence that these cases will be pushed to conviction, but if they should be, the spectacle might be the means of saving hundreds of lives in the future. The only excuse of the men under indictment is that they are no worse than others. That is bad for the others, but it is no defense for those who have been caught.

ALTON B. PARKER SAYS:

"I Read the NEW YORK WORLD Every Day."

THE WORLD Elected Cleveland.

"It may be said without reservation that if the Democratic party in my first campaign had lacked the forceful and potent advocacy of Democratic principles at that time by the NEW YORK WORLD the result might have been reversed."—GROVER CLEVELAND'S LETTER TO THE WORLD, MAY 10, 1903.

Bryan on THE WORLD.

"THE WORLD never during the last twenty years considered itself a party paper. It promised to spread truly Democratic principles and truly Democratic ideas, and it has done so, with entire independence of bosses, machines and platforms, following only the dictates of its conscience."—QUOTED, WITH APPROVAL, BY WILLIAM J. BRYAN IN THE COMMONER, JULY 10, 1903.

Both Sides of the Great Political Battle Fully and Fairly Given. FIRST NEWS! BEST NEWS!

THE WORLD IN THIS PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

THE WORLD, as the "Chief Champion in America of Democratic Ideas," will be the most interesting newspaper in the country in this Presidential campaign.

It already has a much larger circulation than any other morning newspaper in America.

It will tell everything that is done or said to the public by both Presidential candidates every day until after the election.

Its editorial page will—as it always has—support Democratic platforms and Democratic leaders when they are right. It will not support—and it never has supported—them when they desert true Democratic principles and put themselves in the wrong.

Its news will be absolutely fair and impartial. It believes that the truth is always to be told.

The World believes that the triumph of the Democratic party on a truly Democratic platform means a return to sanity and purity, a return to those ideals which won for Americans the admiration of the world as a people who minded their own business, and were willing other people should do the same.

It on these lines that the battle must be fought. The divergence is sharp and clear. On one side are corporate might, the spirit of adventure, millions and yet more millions for army and navy, and a dangerous foreign policy. On the other side are equal opportunity for all, the development of the individual, a just observance of the rights of others, and honest and moderation in the public expenditures. The progress of the present campaign will always be told tersely, truthfully by The World. If you are interested, as you should be, in a vital contest, you will need it every day. No Democrat or Republican should be happy without it. The World never appeals to class prejudice.

To encourage the prompt formation of clubs for the campaign a special offer is made, as follows: We will send the Danville Intelligencer and the MORNING WORLD every weekday for four months for $1.00; Regular price, $1.50. This is a splendid clubbing offer. The New York World is America's greatest newspaper. Sample copies of The World supplied free on application. Every subscription will be for the DAILY Morning World for FOUR months from the date it begins.

Democratic Success.

Why should it be assumed to be improbable that the Democrats should carry the election? The party's successes at the polls are not so few and far between that a victory ought to seem marvellous. It is true that it has lost steadily since it deserted its own standards and adopted the Populist folly, but it has discarded that, and free from that pestilential nonsense, the party has a noble series of victories to point to.

In the last five Presidential elections the Democracy was successful twice, and a third time it secured a plurality in the popular vote. In three successive Presidential elections there were more Democratic than Republican votes. To talk about the party's prospects now as if there weren't any, and as if the party stood about where the Prohibition or the Socialist parties stand, is ridiculous.

In the last thirty years fifteen Houses of Representatives have been chosen. Of these the Democrats controlled eight and the Republicans seven. But the advantage of the Democrats free from Populism is far greater than that. Between 1874 and 1894 ten Houses of Representatives were chosen, and of these eight were Democratic and only two were Republican. The popular branch of Congress was Democratic four years out of five. Nearly all the time the Senate remained Republican because of the number of small Republican States. But the Democrats had a majority of the people.

In the last ten years five Houses of Representatives have been elected, and every one was Republican. But this ten years is the period of Bryanism, Populism, silverism, everything that is undemocratic. The party has now sloughed these off, and is back in the position in which it outvoted the Republican party three times out of five on the Presidency and eight times out of ten in the Congressional elections. The odds are on its side.

Judge Parker's Accomplishments.

We are gradually learning more about Judge Parker. The telegram to the St. Louis Convention proved that he can write. Now the Critic prints a picture of the Democratic candidate with a copy of that interesting periodical in his hand. This is pretty good proof that he can read. When he delivers his speech of acceptance Aug. 10 it will be shown that he can also talk, and all the money will have been dissipated. It has long been known that Judge Parker could think, but it is a wise candidate who does not reveal all his accomplishments at once.—New York World.
