OF COURSE ADVERTISING PAYS.

It is needless for us to direct your attention to the advertisement of the Schreyer Store Co., you all already know of its existence. It has appeared each week, in different form, for over two years, and has become part of your reading matter weekly. not only interesting in its construction, bu profi able to our readers who are constantly on the lookout for bargains. This week it appears in double its form and value, and if you do not read y word of it it is your loss. The Schreyer Store is Milton's foremost trading place, and a credit to the town it is. It has associated mammouth proportions and its match is not found in this section of the State. What has mule this store what it is? The answer come echoing back from all sides, "Advertising!" consequences to the second se at this store.

There are other stores that have these good qualities, too. But why is it they do not prosper that advance as does the Schreyer Store? Why, simply because they lack the most escential thing— THE ADVERTISING.

There is only one way to construct the Panana ennal and that is to stop talking and dig dirt.

Our merchants must remember that it costs to have an advertisement in a newspaper. We know when we enter their stores that we must pay for what we get.

Secretary Hay has petitioned Congress to create a new Diplomatic post in Morrocco. A surprising number of statesmen out of a job think such a bill should pass.

Japan and Russia are proving the truth of George Eliots sayings, that "having to meet a man whom you dislike is not observed always to end in a mutual attachment.

An aspirant to a consulship from Indians is advertis-ed as a "talented orator." Our consuls need an equip-ment of more languages rather than so much American oratory.

The federation of women's clubs has organized a com-mittee to introduce domestic sciences into the colleges. Now if they will introduce it into the homes the work will be complete.

TO OUR MERCHANTS.

The period immediately following the Christ mas holidays is usually one of the dullest seasons in the whole year for the retail trade. Buyers of all classes have been spending money freely, and many of them feel more disposed of retrenchment then to ncrease their outlay. The merchants themselves are to some extent had a busy, trying season, and have probably been overworked. What has more effect than all the rest is that they neglect their advertising, and in some cases, withdraw it altogether for a time. This, to any one who fully appreciates the benefits that to any one who fully appreciates the benchts that may be obtained by using printers' ink, appears to be suicidal; but the merchants who adopt such a course think they are justified by existing condi-tions. They will tell that there is no money in cir-culation, that people are supplied with all the goods they need, and that they will not come out to buy in stormy weather. And they will clinch these and similar arguments by saying that it is only wasted money to advertise when nobody wants to buy. The merchant who has carefully studied the principles of advertising will take an entirely differ-ent view of the matter. He will argue that the chief use of advertising is to induce people to buy who have no particular inclination to do so. He will hold that the time for him to sell the most is will hold that the time for him to sell the most is when his competitors are selling but little. Instead of neglecting his advertising he will give it more than the usual amount of attention, and instead of decreasing or withdrawing it, he will probably use more space than before. He will be well aware more space than before. He will be well aware that the public will not buy his stock at that time unless he offers them sufficient inducement; but he will also recognize the fact that if some of his goods are not sold soon he will be forced to keep them on

With these facts in view the wise merchant begins at once to plan his mid-winter campaign. He has no intention of carrying his winter stock over, and he will not sell it at a loss if he can help it. He is willing to make reasonable concessions, and is ready to offer attractive inducements. He constructs his advertisements in a way that will convince the public that he is determined to sell. He may not make as much money as he does when trade is brisker, but he will turn into cash a lot of goods which he would otherwise have to hold at a loss and he will keep in touch with his customers, and perhaps add a number to the list.

AN INTERESTING PERFORMANCE.

It was easy enough to foresee that when the president got hold of the presidency for a four years' term, and by a popular vote which he could fairly attribute to his personal acceptability to pop-ular sentiment, there would soon be music in the air, and that the Republican congressmen would be invited to dance as he piped. We are on the eve of the opera. He has called a conference to consider various matters, among which are named the rail road rate and the tariff question, upon both of which Republican representatives seem to be disposed to fight shy, and much disinclined to consider at the present session or an extra session. Whereas the president feels just the other way. Whereas the president feels just the other way, being naturally lively and particularly disposed to move in matters where he has decided opinions, as he is supposed to have in these cases. He wants the railroads held up to the equal rates that the laws impose upon them, but which they slip away from so effectively that even one of the president's cabinet, Paul Morton, who came into it from a rail-need vise presidence, is on record with his avidance road vice presidency, is on record with his evidence taken in an official inquiry, that his road, whose traffic he was in charge of, had disregarded the statutes and made rotes to said itself.

statutes and made rates to suit itself. Apparently that young man will be invited by his present chief to explain in return, since such a record is inconsistent with the advertised programme record is inconsistent with the advertised programme of Mr. Roosevelt's performance, that is sure to stir up the animals in the Republican menagerie, whose performance with the ringmaster we will contem-plate as complacently as Betsy did her husband's struggle with the bear. That we are going to have an interesting ring performance, we may fairly sup pose, though it may be that the animals will prove to be so cowed, and the interests moving them to be so fearful of getting a worse welting by resistance, that they may lie down peacefully together to the bones others can save.

SELECT THE BEST MEN.

At the spring elections party affiliations are of times forsaken and the best man or the one most popular and in whom the people have the most con-idence is elected. Within the remaining weeks of January the caucuses will be held and much interes should be manifested by the Democrats to see that the best men of our party are chose for the various offices to be filled if we intend to win out. Election comes on the third Tuesday in the month of February, on the 21st day. Councilmen, school directors and other officers are to be elected.

Let the people of our party turn out in full force at the primary meetings, and especially where "things" are known to exist, and make an effort to effect the best possible ticket that will be placed in the field. effect the best possible ucket that will be placed in the field. Do not sacrifice the party for merely the benefit of one or two, but be firm in your convic-tions after you have once established them. If the Democrats nominate a good ticket, stand by it and vote your principles.
