REMINISCENCES OF THE CIVIL WAR

Danville, Pa., Feb. 20, '05. Daivine, Fa., Feb. 20, 05. To the Editor of the Intelligencer. DEAR SIR:—The following brief letter appeared in Comrade Leu, Fosnot's Watsontown Record and Star of last week, which may be of some interest to the many readers of your valuable journal: Reminiscences of the civil war will ces of the civil war will Reminiscen Reminiscences of the civil war will always remain fresh in the memory of those who participated in the struggle for supremacy during the long and dark days of the rebellion. At this time I call to mind the first charge in front of Petersburg in the summer of 1864, when the third battalion of the Sacond Harva Artillery resignment

Second Heavy Artillery regiment were ordered to charge Battery No. Six. It was a beautiful day in Sum--late in the afternoon, when the

The order was given, "Forward, march!" and out of the woods we swept. Then the command, "Double quick!" and if as on dress parade the battalion emerged from the thicket and down through a newly-plowed peach orchard in front of the fort which belched out solid shot, from barbette guns, and when in close proximity to the parapets, about a thousand feet from the fort, we were ordered to lie down in order to proordered to lie down in order to pro tect ourselves from the terrible fire of

On this occasion I was de-tailed as a vidette, and no sooner had we taken our positions than the Second Heavy began firing over our heads and into the Johnny Rebs, making it so hot that we deserted our posts and fell back to the regiment, the boys of whom thought the enemy was making a charge. Montour county was well represent-ed in the Second Heavy, of which we privates feel a just pride. Among the distinguished officers were Gen. Jas. D. Strawbridge, of near Pots-grove, Col. Wm. M. McClure, and Col. S. Dale Strawbridge of Danville, deceased. — The former was honored with a set in Congress, while the lat-ter recently died at the Soldiers' Home at Hampton, Va. Before the old regiment charged on Fort Har-rison, at Chapin's Farm, Col.
