——PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has a new source of worry. Because of his having appointed several negroes to office it is stated that the president is being besieged by applications for position from other negroes. The Intelligencer will not assume that this is to be an embarassment to the president, but it is an incident worthy of note. Negroes have a perfect right to aspire to positions, and it would be difficult for them to annoy the president more than some white men have done than some white men have done.

—The anxiety of the express companies as betrayed in editorials inspired and paid for appearing in various large dailies would indicate that they are alarmed at the probability of a parcels post law. We take our congressmen from the people and i they have not been educated or broadened by travel the best thing the country can do for itself and them is to make travel possible for them. Our legislators cannot but make better laws for having outgrown their provincialisms and there is no better or surer way to grow them than by visiting and seeing other countries. A trip to a foreign country may make a man whoop only the louder for his own country and declare that the United States' is good enough for him but he has found out at least there is another country and another civilization and by the time he has forgotten the benighted condition of a people that doesn't have hot corn bread or pie he has begun to remember certain respects in which that same benighted pople is superior to ourselves. ### THE BATTLE OF MUKDEN.

ITH the smoke still hovering over the battlefield of Mukden, the dead uncounted and un-buried, and the fate of the fragment of Kuro-patkin's shattered army still undecided, it is too early to attempt to give to this tremendous conflict its proper place in history. Even the strength of its proper place in history. Even the strength of the contending armies is to some extent as yet a matter of conjecture, but there are certain feets already known which give to the series of actions around Mukden a unique position in the annals of warfare. Leaving for a moment the consideration of the number of men engaged and the proportion of casualties, the peculiar relationships of the combatants to the East and the West, and to the world's civilization, combine to make the battle of Mukden pre collegations are supplied for the East but probably not only epoch-making for the East, but probably also worthy to rank with the decisive battles of the world-with Marathon, Arbela, Chalons, Hastings, Counting Liaoyang as merely preparatory—though on a magnificent and terrible scale—to Mukden, the latter will be recorded as the first battle in which, meeting on comparatively equal terms, an army of Asiatics has administered a crushing defeat upon the intrenched forces of a European Powe: Too much stress must not be laid on this racial aspect of the case, for while at Mukden Mongol was pitted against Caucasian, the former represented, by the strongest of historical anomalies, the most advanced type of modern military and scientific a photograph taken of itself giving up Port Arthur.

—President Roosevelt succeeded better with his message to the Congress of Mothers than with some he has sent to the United States Congress.

Advanced type of modern initiary and scientified development, while Kuropatkin's armies stood in many respects for conditions almost mediaval. Yet the Russians had the prestige of a mighty empire and a name that was feared and dreaded throughout the length and breadth of Asia. in the number of its combatants and the losses of victor and vanquished. Greek annals record that 1,087,000 men were engaged at Arbela, and that at Issus more than one-fifth of the Persian army of 500,000 were killed or captured by the soldiers of Alexander. Similar incredible legends about other Alexander. Similar incredible tegends about other battles of the ancient world might be cited, but all of these may be dismissed as too uncertain to be fit material for comparison. There are ample data from the wars of modern times, however, without going into realms of fable, to show, if the cabled going into realms of lable, to snow, it the carded estimates are anywhere near the truin, that nearly twice as many men faced each other in arms along the Shakhe and the Hun as in the great battle of Leipsic, in 1813, when Napoleon suffered a crushing defeat at the hands of the Allies. Here 470,000 men composed the opposing forces, and the casual-ties are variously given as 21 and 26 per cent. If it be true that 900,000 men fought at Mukden, the percentage of losses—accepting Japan's at 41,222 and Russia's at 130,000—was about 19 per cent, or 26 per cent. if the largest estimate of 200,000 Rus 26 per cent. It the largest estimate of 200,000 Massians killed, wounded and captured should prove correct. These estimates, however, are so disproportionate—8 per cent. for the attacking forces and 30 to 47 per cent. for the vanquished—that they must be discounted. In the Napoleonic wars, in Prussia's operations against Austria and France and in the American Civil War there was no such concentration of con-tending armies as has taken place in Manchuria. Of tending armies as has taken place in Malcottal. Or the first group, 200,000 fought at Jena and Auerstadt; 260,000 at Bautzen; 280,000 at Wagram, and 240,000 at Borodino. More than 400,000 men Bumoerea "396,000 and 593,000 at Sadowa: while in our own war in the 60s a vastly greater number of men were under arms, but only 122,519 Union and Confederate soldiers, out only 122,513 Union and Confederate soldiers fought at Antietan, 178,000 at Fredericksburg, 190,000 at Chancellorsville and 167,000 at Gettysburg. At the last-named battle the proportion of losses was far greater than at Mukden, but not the aggregate; and this is the case with others of the great battles of history. This seems to prove the oft-repeated claim that, awful as has been the slaughter in Manchuria, the ratio of killed and wounded has decreased with the improve ment of modern weapons.

their shadows are reflected. Besides being beautiful ornaments to a landscape of the part among the most artificial for a mind the most artificial for the inhabitants of tropleal islands. In supplying actual necessities and in the number of useful purposes to which it can be applied bamboo takes first rank, but the paim comes next. To many of the people of Ceylon the cocoanut trees are everything, and their very lives depend upon them. The tree supplies most of their wants, besides giving them valuable commercial products. In this island there are estimated to be nearly 20,000,000 paim trees, and among the poorer classes a man's wealth is estimated by the number of trees he owns. They form the most important asset of his estate and by will are generally divided among his family. As one of the important traits of the Cingalese is his loves of litigation, one can readily see what an important part the paim tree plays in the law cases there. There is a case on record in which the two thousand five hundred and twentieth part of a grove, containing only ten trees, was the subject of dispute. One of the greatest difficulties which the engineers had to encounter in building a railroad across the island was to determine the ownership of the paim trees. The ramifications of relationships and the fractional claims set up were most difficult to understand and disentangle.

"I had a young friend in California who enlisted in the Union army at the same time with myself, and, coming east, we were placed in the same company. This young fellow fell in love with a Virginia girl and under her influence deserted to the enemy. A few days afterward he was captured and, being easily recognized, was condemned to be shot. He had fought like a demon in the engagement which resulted in his being made a prisoner, for he knew well what his fate would be if taken. His execution was the most mournful ceremony I ever witnessed, and nothing ever seen on the stage was more theatrical—the procession to the scene of death, the band in advance playing a dirge, the coffin, with the prisoner sitting upon it; the guard in the rear and a brigade of cavalry form ed in a hollow square. them ever discovered iron in spite of the fact that the soil of all three countries was largely impregnated with it. Their substitute for it was a combination of metals which had the temper of steel. Despite the greatest efforts the secret of this composition has baffled scientists and has become a lost art. The great explorer, Humboldt tried to discover it from an analysis of a chisel found in an ancient Inca silver mine, but all that he could find out was that it appeared to be a combination of a small portion of th with copper. This combination will not give the hardness of steel, so it is evident that tin and copper could not have been its only component parts. Whatever might have been the nature of the metallic combination, these ancient races were able so to prepare pure copper that it equaled in temper the finest steel produced at the present day by the most scientifically approved process. With their bronze and copper instruments they were able to quarry and shape the hardest known stones, such as granife and porphyry, and even cut emeralds and like substances. A rediscovery of this lost art would revolutionize many trades in which steel at present holds the monopoly. If copper could thus be tempered now its advantage over steel would be vergreat, and it would no doubt be pre-It copper could thus be tempered now its advantage over steel would be very great, and it would no doubt be preferred to the latter in numerous industries. It is a curious fact that, though this lost secret still baffles modern selentists, it must have been discovered independently by the three races which made use of it so long ago.—New York Herald.
